Jackson tapped for school committee seat

by Arlene Surprenant

Brad Jackson is the newest member of the Wilmington School Committee. He was sworn in Tuesday evening following 11 voting rounds during a joint meeting of selectmen and the school board. A resident of Garden Avenue, he had served as vice-chairman of the Wilmington Finance Committee.

Tuesday's meeting was called to fill the vacancy left by Bridget Zukas. In order to be successful, a candidate had to achieve a majority vote of both boards or, in this case, receive the nod from six members in attendance.

Jackson's name was placed in nomination by committeeman Andrea Paglia, who said Jackson's financial expertise was most needed at this time. Jackson faced stiff opposition from former committee veteran Phil Fenton and Peggy Kane, of the Wilmington Home and School Association.

Jackson told those present his goal was threefold: to provide a compassionate, cost effective, and high quality educational system.

"I'm not a professional educator (but) I have a passion to provide the best for the children of Wilmington," stated an articulate Jackson, who urged the school board to consider defining its goals in one, three, and five year packages.

During the roll call process, the lead see-sawed back and forth as members switched their votes several times to try to avoid the deadlock situation and elect a new member that night.

Initially, Fenton claimed a strong lead with five of the necessary six votes. Jackson had only two votes in the beginning, cast by supporters Paglia and James Demos. In the end, he was the choice of Bob Cain, Bob Surran, Shirley Callan, John DeMarco, Demos, and Paglia. Cain seemed to speak for all when he said "the school committee has gained a very talented person."

Before being sworn in by Assistant Town Clerk Kay Scanlon, Jackson officially resigned from the finance committee.

Parents unhappy with reduced busing plan

by Arlene Surprenant

In an emergency meeting triggered by a number of concerned parents' phone calls, the Wilmington School Committee voted three to two last Wednesday to accept the scheduled bus routes for this school year. Parents had phoned several committeemen to question why some kindergarten and first grade students would be walking rather than riding to school, despite previous assurances they would be bused.

The problem, according to Supt. William Fay, is the lack of money due to budget constraints.

"It's a matter of priorities. We're just trying to make do with the resources that we have. And it's not over with," said Fay, noting that the school department could be asked to sustain another $250,000 in cuts.

Athletic Director Jim Gillis, who headed up the team effort to schedule the bus routes, told the board state law and policy largely determined who would ride the 10 elementary buses and nine secondary school buses available. State law dictates that anyone over a two mile radius in grades 9-12 must be bused while anyone over a mile-and-a-half limit in grades K-8 must be bused. In some cases, admitted Gillis, kindergarten and first grade students will be walking to school with older siblings. He said committeemen would be provided with a list of those youngsters soon.

Besides a reduced number of buses, down from fifteen for each level last year, were other prospective problems. Gillis explained that the buses will be "packed" this year with an average of 65 youngsters on each. In the interest of safety, capacity is 78 students, including both riders and standees. Gillis explained there will also be some "very long runs" and late arrivals, with some youngsters arriving home after 4 p.m.

Gillis recommended that the committee approve both the formation of a safety committee to deal with bus issues and a chain of command to handle bus complaints this year. The school board agreed to such a chain, where parents will first contact their child's principal should a problem arise, followed by Gillis, the safety committee, and members of the school board.

Gillis noted there has been an increase from nine to 16 crossing guards at various key locations and bus stops are located as much as possible in the vicinity of kindergarten students. He also explained that some "minor adjustments" may have to be made later, though the new routes were created with safety in mind and a great deal of cooperation from the Wilmington Police Department and the Trombly Bus Co.

Committeemen were disturbed that buses wouldn't be provided for all children in the earliest grades.

"It was never my understanding there would be any kindergarten students walking one way," said Shirley Callan, who also opposed distances some primary students would have to walk. Many agreed with her that busing kindergartners and first graders should be a major priority of the board.

Jim Demos suggested that residents let the committee know whether their priorities lie with more buses, which would cost an additional $25,000 for each vehicle, or with such things as larger class sizes. During a discussion on the possibility of carpooling and using other options to get children safely to school, Andrea Paglia noted that at some point "parents do have to be responsible."

A contingent of parents, largely from the Hathaway Acres area, were present to express their concern with their children walking to school. They pointed out that their neighborhood has no sidewalks and it was unsafe to walk, especially during the snowy winter months.

"I think getting the kids to school safely is a top priority," said Linda Hansen of Gunderson Road.

Fay said administrators will monitor the routes carefully in the next few weeks. If there is an opportunity to combine buses, that would be done, he promised.

Early tax bills

Wilmington tax bills will be sent out early this year, according to Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski. In an effort to reduce borrowing costs, the town will send out estimated tax bills on or about October 1.

The town budget has not yet been finalized, and will not be complete until a special town meeting on October 16. Normally, tax bills are not sent out until the budget is finalized, and the tax rate isvoted by the selectmen and approved by the state.

This year, the bills will be sent out early, with the estimated amount based on the bill that was sent in May. The bill will not include betterments or water and sewer liens, which cannot be included on an estimated bill. Taxpayers will be allowed to make advance payments on these charges, which could be advantageous to certain people for income tax purposes.

Tax bills will be due 30 days after the postmark date.

New tooth

On the first day of school, there's always a lot of excitement. For instance, there's that new tooth that Megan Ballou had to show to Sara Holmes, at the Woburn Street School in Wilmington. The girls are both entering the first grade. (Photo by Christine Tighe)

No agreement yet on budget cuts

by Arlene Surprenant

There was a lot of discussion about the town's $536,298 deficit at a joint meeting of the school committee, selectmen, and finance committee Tuesday night, but little in the way of a solution to the town's continuing budget woes.

Only two concrete solutions were offered. Kevin Sowyrda of the Shawsheen Tech School Committee said his board, which was "sensitive" to the town's fiscal crisis, had unanimously voted to reduce assessments to the five member towns by 2.2 percent. This will mean a savings to Wilmington of $24,318, which is expected to be returned to the town in June, he added.

Another possible solution came under prolonged discussion. Many present favored the idea of trying to convince the Wilmington Redevelopment Authority to gift the town with all or part of the almost $600,000 in the WRA account for the development of Wilmington Town Center. If that isn't possible, it was suggested an article be drawn up to take the funds at October's special town meeting.

This suggestion had been made at prior meetings by Selectman Michael McCoy. McCoy and others advocated taking the funds, though Selectman Jim Stewart warned that this would only be a short term solution to a long term problem. It was pointed out that, legally, the town cannot demand the money but can only request it as a gift.

The FY 1990 budget shortfall was caused by reductions in local aid. According to Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski, the original $870,878 budget deficit has been revised downward to $538,379, thanks to reductions in the MWRA assessment and the retirement fund.

Under a reduction plan proposed by the town manager, the town would be forced to cut its budget further by $273,352, the school department would have to cut its budget by another $242,022, and the Tech would need to cut $20,924 to meet the total shortfall. The plan was met with resistence on the part of the school committee and some members of fincom, who claimed the school department had already borne an inequitable share of the burden as a result of town meeting action and cannot bear anymore.

Fincom's Walter Kaminski claimed the town manager's plan was unfair since an additional $242,000 was found before town meeting and only distributed to the town side of the ledger as a result of a town meeting vote. Stapczynski disputed that, saying the monies came from

Vacancy on housing authority to be filled next week

Members of the Wilmington Housing Authority (WHA) intend to nominate Joan Sadowski as a new member, in the joint meeting with the selectmen, to be held September 11. A. Daniel Gillis said he intends to make the nomination. Whoever is elected will take the place of Warren Newhouse, who is to leave for Montana September 18.

Gillis confessed that he was "extremely surprised" at the news that Selectman McCoy intends to nominate George Hooper to fill the vacancy. He has, personally nothing against Hooper, he said.

Five members of the WHA were at the Tuesday night meeting, and all said they would vote for Sadowski, a former member of the Wilmington Conservation Commission.

There was a discussion on whether or not a tenant at the Deming Way housing could be a member of the WHA. Four ladies were present, and none were interested in the honor. Newhouse told the Authority that he had been to the Boston Housing Authority, and had been told it was "Mandatory" to have a tenant on the Boston Housing Authority.

WHA Executive Director Ella Belmore reported that the house which is being constructed on Ohio Street for the WHA is "coming along." It is time to start painting she said.

Attorney Bob Vassalo has told the Authority that he should be replaced. He feels that he might not be available as the authority's attorney, sometime, when needed, because of other business.

Gillis spoke of the National Association of Housing and Redevelopment Authority (NAHRO), an organization of housing authority members which is interested in keeping housing for the elderly separate from other types of housing. There is to be a meeting of local members in Plymouth next Saturday, and there will be one at the WHA September 12, a 15-minute meeting. Gillis expects members from Tewksbury, North Reading, Reading, Woburn, Burlington and Arlington.

Recycling meeting Sept. 11

The Wilmington Recycling Advisory Committee will be meeting Thursday, September 14 at 6:15 p.m. in room 4 at the town hall.

The committee will discuss implementing the decision of the board of selectmen to locate a recycling drop-off center and a leaf composting area off Old Main Street. The committee will also discuss progress toward issues regarding publicity for the drop-off center.

Interested citizens are encouraged to attend.

Scouts have active summer

Wilmington Boy Scouts of Troop 56 had an active summer. The troop is chartered by the Congregational Church.

Thirty-two scouts spent a week at Camp Wah-Tut-Ca during July 16-22. Wah-Tut-Ca is part of the Greater Lowell Council Scout Reservation at Northwood, N.H. Leadership was provided by Scoutmaster Bob Rachdorf, Asst. Scoutmasters Bill Blowers and Ken Chioccola, together with troop Committee Chairman Tom Finn.

Along with the fun Scouts worked to earn advancements. Forty-four merit badges and 22 skill awards, along with 23 special awards were earned. They are to be presented at a special Court of Honor in September.

Troop 46 also earned the highest award at Wah-Tut-Ca for "Attendance, Merit, and Honor." asst. Scoutmaster Eric Rachdorf spent the whole summer at the camp, serving as head chef. Serving with him were Scouts Ken Blowers (kitchen staff) and Paul Rich (ecology and conservation).

Twenty Scouts from the troop spent a week camping and bicycling on Nantucket Island from August 9 to 15, under the leadership of Scoutmaster Bob Rachdorf, with Asst. Scoutmaster Dick Kiesinger and "Patrol Dad" Dan Bates. Much of the money for the trip was individually earned by the Scouts, but Christmas tree sales last December and the sale of ice cream, etc. during the Fourth of July Holiday helped offset the cost.

The troop enjoyed fabulous weather on the island, in which to take advantage of beaches and surf.

WHEN IT POURS

It is hard to come up with a better buy in insurance today than an "Umbrella policy." For a relatively small amount, one may purchase such a policy to raise his liability coverage to one million dollars, or more. It may be used as an adjunct to either an auto policy or a homeowners policy. There is no need to specify which one an umbrella policy applies to. It combines all liability coverage in one policy. Before an insurance company issues an umbrella policy, it may require that a policyholder have either $300,000 worth of liability coverage on his home or $500,000 on his car. Any payout beyond these limits would be taken care of by the umbrella policy. Such coverage is a god idea for anyone who wishes to protect his considerable assets from a high negligence award.

SPINELLI INSURANCE AGENCY, INC. has the capabilities of serving the many needs of our clients with quality insurance protection. We can provide you with the best insurance policy at the most competitive price. We make sure that your insurance coverage is designed to meet your needs. Using our skill and knowledge, we develop a well planned program for the client. We don't just sell insurance, we help you buy it. TAX PLANNING IN DIVORCE

When a divorcing couple starts to negotiate alimony, child support and division of assets, tax considerations play a big part. Here are some things to think about:

It's more advantageous for the payer to make alimony payments than child support, because alimony is tax-deductible for the payer and taxable income for the recipient. Child support has no tax ramifications. Where a spouse falls behind in alimony and child support payments, though, the amount that is paid has to be considered child support first, the Tax Court ruled recently.

Who gets the house? The spouse who remains in the family home gets a tax advantage when he or she sells it: the opportunity to roll over any capital gain into a new home, or the one-time $125,000 exclusion. The ex who moved out - no longer using it as a primary home - just gets a capital-gains bill. An ideal divorce settlement divides joint property to allow for tax consequences.

Woburn Street playground to include handicapped area

by Arlene Surprenant

The Woburn Street School PAC is currently in the planning stage of researching a handicapped play area at the elementary school.

According to PAC member Janine Gaudreau, her group will be researching designs in the next few days and working closely with Wilmington's DPW Supt. Bob Palmer. They are also applying for a federal grant in conjunction with Handicapped Affairs to help fund the playground. The deadline for grant applications is September 8, said Gaudreau.

"The playground will be as much handicapped accessible as we can make it," Gaudreau told the Town Crier Monday. The all wood playground will have equipment geared to safety and physical development and, in addition, games will be drawn on a blacktop area at the school. Gaudreau explained that a new state law now requires that a certain portion of each playground to be built in Massachusetts has to be accessible to handicapped children. She added that the Woburn Street School is the only elementary school in town without a playground.

Rocco loses appeal on sale of App land

When it comes to friendship, there's nothing wrong with a handshake. But when it comes to business, a handshake, even between friends, is not enough.

The state appeals court on Aug. 14, affirmed a ruling in a superior court case which refused a real estate broker his commission on a case, because no purchase and sale agreement was signed.

The case involved former Wilmington selectman Rocco DePasquale, and Joseph App, a retired Wilmington contractor. The two men had been friends for many years as fellow members of the Lions Club.

Mediplex, a firm which recently opened a $7 million nursing home on Woburn Street, first purchased land on Hillside Way. Neighbors, however, were quite opposed to having a nursing home in the area. Rocco, a licensed real estate broker, then kept his eye out for another parcel which might be suitable for the nursing home.

When Joe App retired in 1986 and sold his contracting business to Ray Lepore, Rocco inquired about App's land, 17 acres on Main Street. App told him he was talking to a few parties, with the highest offer being $500,000.

Rocco said he thought he could do better than that, if App would let him. App agreed and they shook hands.

Rocco approached Jon Tresslow of Mediplex, who toured the property and was interested. There were several details to be worked out, but Mediplex was willing to pay $600,000 for the property. Rocco would make a commission of $60,000, ten percent of the sale.

Three days before the purchase and sale agreement was to be signed, Rocco received a call from Attorney Mike Tyner, who had been retained to represent App. He told Rocco that he was advising App that he could not sign the purchase and sale agreement. Why? There was a valid option on the property.

When App sold his contracting business to Lepore, he also sold him an option on the land, valid until February 1987. The option agreement read that the price would be at the "market value" of the property at the time of sale.

Lepore sold his option to developer Jay Tighe, and the property was bought under the BCT Trust, at a price of $600,000.

Tighe then turned around and offered the property to Mediplex. Of course, the price was higher, much higher. Mediplex said, in effect, thanks but no thanks.

Rocco asserted that he had earned his commission, since he had caused the price to increase by $100,000. App refused to pay, and Rocco sued on three counts, one for the value of his services, one for misrepresentation, and the last for unfair and deceptive conduct.

The court ruled for App, since no purchase and sale agreement had been signed. Although App received value for Rocco's services, Rocco had not protected himself with a contract.

.....Opinion.....

Frankly Speaking

by Kevin John Sowyrda

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) may meet its greatest challenge at the ballot box next November in light of a referendum petition sponsored by Citizens for Limited Taxation (CLT). The referendum would impair the agency's ability to borrow money at affordable rates for the cleanup of Boston Harbor.

Barbara Anderson is the Executive Director of CLT and a veteran champion of Massachusetts taxpayers. In an interview on Tuesday, Anderson said her referendum question, which will receive either a legal blessing or rejection by the attorney general on Wednesday, accomplishes three major goals.

The first, destined to gain broad support from voters, returns to Bay State residents the 15 percent increase in the income tax. Second, the referendum would annul any tax increases that may take place between the filing of the referendum question (August 2) and Election Day November 1990. Third, the CLT initiative would roll back all fee increases which occured since January, 1988. This would affect all agencies and state authorities, particularily the MWRA.

Though the centerpiece of Anderson's referendum is repeal of the unpopular increase in the income tax, it also takes aim at what has become a popular target in state government, the Mass. Water Resources Authority. As part of its mandate to rehabilitate Boston Harbor and modernize the metropolitan area water and sewer systems, the authority has drastically increased assessments paid by member communities. Wilmington is part of the MWRA system and will pay $660,581 in assessments during this fiscal year. This represents a 37 percent increase from FY '89.

Paul Levy, the top man at Water Resources, is facing his first public rebellion. Though water and sewer rates are voted by a board of directors which in part represents MWRA cities and towns, for the most part the authority has had the freedom to increase rates independent from scrutiny.

Levy argues that Anderson's ballot question will threaten the harbor cleanup because its mere presence on the ballot causes a hike in the agency's borrowing costs.

"We are just about to go to the bond agencies, and the mere existence of this petition would hurt our rating," said Levy.

A leading Massachusetts bond counsel explained to this writer that banks would lower the bond rating for MWRA in reaction to Anderson's petition since the water agency is pledging revenues over the term of their bond, and the ballot question provides the strong possibility that these revenues would be reduced. In turn, holders of the bond would be squeezed by the sudden inability of the agency to raise more money.

Levy said his agency has appealed to the attorney general not to certify the ballot question due to constitutional issues. Should CLT pass the scrutiny of the attorney general's review this week, Levy plans to take his case to the courts.

The head of CLT said her organization does not oppose all fee increases, such as the recent hike for MBTA fares. However, Anderson quipped that that increase could have been 100 times greater and taxpayers would have had no immediate resolve but to pay.

"We decided that the situation is so serious that we needed an overhaul of everything," said Anderson.

Anderson said the psychology of the bond market should not determine how people vote on her initiative. "The people have lost control of many parts of their income that go to state authorities," said Anderson. As to the issue of the MWRA bond rating being jeopardized, Anderson said banks reacted similarly in 1980 when they lowered bond ratings for cities and towns because of Proposition 21/2, the property tax cap petition.

Anderson has been critical of banks for taking ballot initiatives into account when setting bond ratings, and said that more pertinent economic information should be their guide. "There's nothing that bankers like better than unlimited access to taxpayers' money," said Anderson.

Meanwhile, the public may finally have its revenge on the MWRA. Should Anderson's petition survive legal challenge, voters will certainly approve the tax cutting measure in high numbers. Unfortunately, the end result will be increased costs for the authority to the tune of tens of millions of dollars, according to Levy.

Anderson's petition has its greatest merit in repeal of the income tax hike. However, its true flaw is where it attacks the water authority. Levy, who's been a shining star in state service, has continually been upfront with the public in stating that the cost of cleaning up the harbor and ensuring safe water for the future will be a heavy burden to bear.

After years of dumping every piece of imaginable waste into the harbor, while completely neglecting the maintenance and development of water and sewer mains in the metropolitan area, drastic increases in assessments, as unfortunate as they may be, should come as little surprise.

While increased taxes and hiked licensing fees are appropriate targets for repeal, the MWRA assessments are a harsh necessity in ensuring safe, clean drinking water for 46 cities and towns, Wilmington included.

So, tell us what you think!

point of view

Buses consume a lot of budget

by Arlene Surprenant

Bus routes and the safety of Wilmington students continue to occupy the Wilmington School Committee. In the past few years, there seemed to be a preoccupation with transportation. Concerned parents would urge the committee to provide bus transportation for their children. In the name of safety, the committee would acquiesce to the various requests.

This year, however, changes must take place. Money is tight. There are other priorities to be considered.

The school committee has wisely voted to make the classroom and teaching staff its first priority. As a result, the number of buses available has been reduced and crowded vehicles and longer routes will now be the order of the day. In addition, more children than ever before will be forced to walk up to a mile and a half to two miles each way.

Parents' concern over the safety of their children is understandable. Indeed, no stone should be left unturned in trying to provide transportation to all children in grades K through two as previously promised.

However, we must be realistic. Severe cuts have been made in the school budget. More cuts, which the superintendent says could lead to "a second rate educational system," are being planned. No one is happy with the current situation, which will only get worse before it gets better.

As parents, our cooperation is needed. Now is not the time to place the whole burden on beleaguered administrators and members of the school board. Now is the time for us to pick up the slack and help bear the burden of getting our children back and forth safely to school. This could easily be accomplished by carpooling or walking the few blocks with our sons and daughters. Aren't our children worth some inconvenience and the sacrifice of our precious time?

Instead of complaining, we should try to look on the situation as an opportunity to get to know our children better. Kids are funny creatures. Some are independent. Some are shy and full of secrets. Most crave attention and wish there was more time to spend with parents who are often too busy just trying to survive in today's busy world. A walk to and from school might allow time for shared confidences and a new feeling of closeness to develop between parent and child.

There are other advantages. Carpooling could lead to a sense of community as parents reach out to others in the neighborhood. There are health benefits to be gained, too, as our children stride purposefully along in the fresh air (or more likely, in slow motion) to reach school before that first bell rings. And all that exercise doesn't cost one red cent!

The voters of Wilmington soundly defeated the override, which would have provided some leeway in the school budget. Unless a miracle -- or another override attempt -- occurs, we must live within the current budget. We have no choice. Neither do members of the Wilmington School Committee.

The job of our school system is to educate. It is not to run a taxi service. Education takes place in the classroom, not on buses. If we do not give the school department the wherewithal to hire more buses, then we have no choice but to bear some of the responsibility for transporting our own children to and from school each day.

letters to the editor

Dear Larz:

I would like to respond to a letter in last week's paper by Mr. Robert G. Peterson in support of Phil Fenton to fill the vacancy left by Bridget Zukas and his quote "each of the applicants for this vacancy had ample opportunity to become a candidate prior to the general elections of 1989, but each with the exception of Mr. Fenton elected not to do so."

I may not be politically known in this town, but I resent the fact that I at least can't be acknowledged that I did make the effort by becoming a candidate for the school committee in the general elections of 1989.

I was the first to announce my candidacy for the school committee in November of 1988 with a firm commitment to be an advocate for both the parents and children of this town to work for the best education that could be provided to our children.

I will continue to run for a seat on the Wilmington School Committee in this upcoming election with the hope that people will at least remember me as one who wants to do his part to help the children of Wilmington.

Very truly yours,
James H. Doucette

Dear Larz:

As I walk my dog twice daily around my neighborhood I am constantly aware of the ever increasing rubbish that destroys the environment.

I wrote this poem as a bit of satire and serious protest.

I hope that you may have space to print it even though it will evade the "Turkeys."

"Meleagris gallopavo"*
When the roll is called up yonder,
I'll be there.
With my Fritos bags and beer cans,
I'll be there!!

I will clutter up the Cosmos,
as I have this little Earth,
Toss it out the window,
I'll be there!

Throw it in the bushes,
Drop in on the roadway,
Cans and bottles; wrappers,
I've been there!

Making love at midnight,
'neath the fading moon,
Condoms make great litter,
I've been there!

I'm the macho man, great lover,
and possibly your neighbor,
I leave a trail of litter,
I've been there!

I'm just a common Ya-Hoo,
An inconsiderate slob,
But, I love my flag and country,
I've been there!

Dear Larz:

Five weeks ago our 19 year old son/brother, John, was killed in an automobile accident. There are no words to describe the grief and loneliness that we were experiencing. We knew it would be difficult to carry on with the loss of someone so loved.

However, we received such an outpouring of love and sympathy for John and ourselves, that we realized that we could carry on, as we were not alone.

It is with these thoughts in mind, and with all the love and gratitude in our hearts, that we would like to thank everyone who helped us through this difficult time.

To John's close friends, classmates, and co-workers; to our dear friends and neighbors; to all of Angela's friends; to the many organizations; to our beloved family; and especially to Fr. Hughes, we will never forget your acts of kindness, generosity and concern.

You are the ones who came to us in our time of need with your prayers, with flowers, with mass cards, with food, with sympathy cards, with memorial donations, and most important, with the support we needed.

From the support we received we realized how many lives John had touched, we will miss him terribly. However, we will never forget all the kindness that was shown to us at this time.

Sincerely,
Bob, Marilyn and Angela Gage

One-seventh "Jester's Song"

In days of ole, and knights were bold, from Neilson's town invented.
The Duke is short 800,000 t'was told;
now we need new incentive.

What say you -- the Sheriff's gone, rumoured with a box?
Fear not, my turf's forelorn, cometh the Silver Fox.

Henchmen up to dirty deeds, (budget)
Sit at the room 9 table.
Pray you -- see our needs,
No taxes, if you're able.

Mid evil madness reigns the land,
Alas the purse is tight.
Five selected Knights to give a hand,
Work to show their might.

Talleyman, Knights and Henchmen, abound,
Sure to be a solution.
Good men, maids and maidens are found
Among the financial pollution.

Yonder maiden, once coined to be a bird,
Worked hard and long to be at the finish.
Sad new, unhappy days, tis the latest word,
Oh, the maiden's term hath diminish.

Get well, fair well is the people's wishes;
with prayers you are anointed.
Round up the eligible mister, mrs. and misses,
Someone must be appointed.

Hark, there is something old, something new, something borrowed, something blue, collecting in our midst.
Tis not a wedding, but to fill the lady's shoe.
Fetch one from the list!

Henchmen get settled and join the knights,
the talleymen await.
Round the table to make our rights,
decide what is our fate!

Money woes and courses to be found in Fred's imagination.
"Tis a messenger" howled the watching hound.
Trouble spreads across the nation!!"

So, you're afraid of bats?

The following editorial was published in the Vermont News Guide, in Manchester Center, Vermont. It was written by Jack Quinn, editor and publisher.

We had a visitor at our house one night last week. A Vermont brown bat found its way in and then became confused by the lights and the confined spaces of our bedrooms and upstairs hall. Frantically trying to find its way out, it flew from room to room, brushing the walls and ceilings as it swooped, now high, now low. Occasionally it rested, hanging head down, using its wing fingers to grasp the wall at ceiling height, and watching us. I'm sure it expected to be eaten at any moment and so, being a sensible little animal, it stayed as far away as possible.

I tried bat removal method number one, which is to close the doors, open the windows, and turn off the lights. At some point during the night, the bat will find its own way out. The disadvantage of this method is that it takes too long and no one is going to convince children that the bat is really gone and that it's ok to go to sleep. Bat removal method number two is quicker and painless, both for the children and the bat. When the bat is hanging on the wall and resting, approach slowly and put a wide-mouthed gallon jar over it. Slide a paper or a thin book between the jar mouth and the wall and the bat's a prisoner. In our case, everyone took a good look at the bat before we released it on the porch and watched it fly into the night.

Summer visits by bats to home interiors are common. I get very tired of hearing heroic stories about tennis rackets, baseball bats, folded newspapers, and shotguns used on three ounce bats that eat mosquitos, not people. Contrary to popular myths, bats in our part of the world are not commonly rabid, do not tangle themselves in long hair, and are not blood seeking vampires. Why then, are the majority of us so fearful of bats? Do they really have the faces of imps and devils or do we give our imps and devils the faces of bats?

Everything that we are mentally and emotionally is a response to training. Fears, addictions and prejudices, as well as the good traits that we carry, are a composite of the messages we've been given, mostly by our parents. We might say that a way to measure maturity is to review rationally all those messages of childhood and decide which to keep and which to throw away.

It's interesting to take this rational, grown-up viewpoint and apply it to our original scenario of monster versus victim. Remember, the bat thought that we were the monsters. If there are children in your house and you handle a bat incident badly, your fear gets transmitted to a new generation. Widening the focus a bit - Would you believe that anything you do or say in front of a child trains him or her for better or for worse?

Arts grant applications available

The Wilmington Council for the Arts has announced that it will once again distribute monies allotted by the Mass. Arts Lottery to artists, teachers and organizations for furthering culture in the community.

The applications and guidelines for granting are now available in the town manager's office at the town hall and at the public library. Specific directions are given on the back of the forms and must be followed explicitly in order to be considered for selection. Incomplete, untyped or incorrect forms will not be returned for changes. Applications must be received by the Council for the Arts, Town Hall, Wilmington by closing time Friday, September 22, 1989. Pass applications for obtaining student tickets must also be submitted by that time. For more information contact Elizabeth at 658-2042.

The Wilmington Arts Council distributed $2800 at the spring cycle. Two high school seniors were awarded scholarships to further their education in the art field, the Council received money for programs and students were able to visit museums and have lectures. Through the Pass allocation of $1285.00, 268 students will see a live performance at a theater outside the school.

A & M NURSERY & FLORIST

SO GLAD

It seems that the gladiola has finally shed its image as a flower that is only associated with funerals. People have come to regard it as a tall-stemmed flower of lively color that is just right for a contemporary setting. Nothing quite catches the eye as a dozen three-foot spikes of gladiolas in colors ranging from peach and pink to red. In fact, gladiolas are available in nearly thirty different colors. When not used alone in a striking contemporary pose, gladiolas add far-reaching highlights in mixed arrangements. Either way, gladiolas are bold, colorful flowers that call attention to their lively presence. This makes them a perfect selection when the occasion calls for an emphasis on the uplifting aspect of life.

Don't forget Grandparents Day, September 10. A & M NURSERY AND FLORIST has lots of unique ideas that will help you show those special people in your life how much they are appreciated. We're conveniently located at 911 East Street in Tewksbury. We custom design flower arrangements to suit your particular tastes. Store hours: Monday - Saturday 8 - 5:30, Sunday 8 - 4. Telephone: 851-4472

letter to the editor

Dear Larz:

I would like to revise some information I have enlightened you about. That is the dolphin/tuna issue.

First, I have recently learned that the Ralston Purina company has concluded the sale of its Van Camp Seafood operation (Chicken of the Sea). They wrote to me saying, "Please be assured we share your concern that all animals should receive humane treatment."

Also, the Heinz Company (Starkist) was restricted from buying Bumble Bee tuna by the federal government in fear of a monopoly.

Furthermore, I have obtained additional updated information suggesting we no longer substitute white meat albacore tuna for chunk light tuna. "Japanese, Korean, and Taiwanese fishing fleets are capturing albacore, along with dolphins, sea turtles, sea birds, seals, whales and other sea life in huge driftnets they set out in the South Pacific.

Finally, there has been some small, but significant steps made toward saving our beloved cousins of the sea. On July 19, 1989, Barbara Boxer's "Dolphin Protection Consumer Information Act" was passed. This connotes that all tuna products sold in the United States will have one of the following labels: "Dolphin Safe" or "The tuna in this product has been captured with technologies that are known to kill dolphins." Congresswoman Barbara Boxer of California's 6th District said, "This bill will let the informed consumer have freedom of choice to save the dolphins." Within 180 days of the date of enactment, the Secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services, after consultation with the Marine Mammal Commission, must publish proposed regulations for implementation of the act.

Now it is up to you! Every one of you! Will you let this harmless, intelligent, jovial creature be extinguished from this earth forever? It is your decision. You can make a difference.

"Maybe I'm overprotecting, but I don't want my funeral to be a burden for my children."

I chose Forethought® funeral planning I've been to funerals where people were more upset from fussing with one another over how things should be, than they were from grief itself. That's not going to happen at mine, because I've taken care of everything in advance ... with Forethought. My children won't have to decide a thing, or even worry about the expense.

Forethought is funeral planning ... before the need arises

We all regret the fact that we won't live forever. It's a fact we simply can't avoid. But, by planning ahead, we can help our children avoid at least one regret... that of decisions made in haste. I have all my final wishes recorded and on file at the funeral home, right down to the last detail. And I bought the Forethought life insurance policy designed and approved specifically for Forethought funeral planning. Because I'm under 90 years old, I can't be turned down for any reason. Now my children won't have to spend a cent. To me, taking this burden off my children just seems like the motherly thing to do.

Demos earns PhD

From the streets of Greece to the halls of academia

by Arlene Surprenant

A Wilmington man who survived eight years in the streets of Greece during World War II, attended kindergarten at age 13, graduated from high school at age 19, and compiled an impressive list of credentials in the educational field since then has recently earned his Doctorate in Education.

Dr. James Demos of Hopkins Street currently serves as a soft-spoken, and sometimes outspoken, member of the Wilmington School Committee. He is also what is known as a survivor.

"I'm not afraid to try anything. If you told me to climb to the top of the tree, probably I'd go out there and break my neck and try it. There's no ceiling to anything; we make our own ceilings," Jim maintained as he recently related highlights of his incredible life thus far.

What is most obvious as you talk with Jim is the way his early childhood shaped the man he is today. Though he was born in the United States, he spent much of his early life in Greece. His dad, Anastos, decided to take his family there for a vacation in 1939 when Jim was five. By a quirk of fate, war broke out and Jim and his two brothers were stuck there for the duration. While in Greece, Jim's mom died and his grief-stricken dad left the boys in the care of an aunt in Louxava and took off for southern Greece.

"We really lived off the streets. I was a goat herder. That's how we survived, doing odds and ends, recalled Jim.

Those odds and ends included stealing items from the Germans and selling them to the Greek Underground for food, working in tobacco fields, and stealing vegetables from fields for nourishment.

During the lean war years, Jim saw his share of horror and tragedy. He saw mothers abused by soldiers in front of their children. He saw males 16 years and older ordered to leave the village or be rounded up and put in prison. He hid in holes in the ground during bombing raids and, one time, helped hide gold rings in a pile of cornhusks to keep them out of German hands. His father, meanwhile, worked as an interpreter for the English Underground and was imprisoned for a time by the Germans.

One incident stands out clearly in Jim's mind. On August 15, 1943, the villagers were preparing to celebrate the Blessed Mother's name date when they received warning from the Germans not to celebrate that year. The villagers decided to ignore the warning. As the day wore on, 16 planes swooped out of the sky and opened fire. Jim and his brothers were pushed aside by their dad, but others weren't as lucky. Many of the villagers met certain death, like the clarinet player who was cut down as he ran across the field.

In looking back, Jim views his early years as part of "another" life. He also recalls that his first chance at a formal education came in a Greek version of a one room school house. In his village, children sat by grades on separate benches and were taught by an itinerant teacher, who would work in exchange for food. Jim learned his numbers through what he laughingly calls "the visual approach to learning."

"The way I learned to count was this way -- they had a lot of bedbugs and the one who could count the most could also count the highest," said Jim.

After the American Red Cross evacuated its citizens from Greece, Jim was placed in a school in Cambridge, Massachusetts. Since he could only speak Greek, Jim was assigned to a special education class "where all we did was fight with wiseguys." Thanks to his father's determination to provide his sons with the education he never had, however, Jim was moved to a regular kindergarten class at age 13 and, over the years, met with small successes like becoming class president during his junior year and earning a varsity letter in football in his freshmen year.

> "Human beings have a lot of potential we haven't even tapped yet." -- Jim Demos

It was a few exceptional teachers, like English teacher Miss Maguire and Latin instructor Miss Doherty, who provided Jim with the needed inspiration and self-esteem to stay in school despite the odds. They helped him shape his current philosophy that states "you have to like yourself and you have to try. Others will help you when they see you trying."

Jim also had his share of teachers and counselors who advised him to drop out of school because of his problems with the English language and his late start. Undaunted, Jim became determined to surmount his difficulties. He attended summer school for eight years and studied, not only formal Greek and English, but a smattering of French, Spanish, and Latin as well. Jim pushed himself to complete high school by age 19 and went on to earn a Bachelor of Science degree from Suffolk University, a Master of Education degree from Salem State, and finally his Doctorate in Education from Boston College just this year. Today, Jim is certified in seven areas, including as a superintendent of schools and a school psychologist. He belongs to ten professional organizations and is the Administrator of Special Education of Medford Public Schools

Jim generously attributes much of his success in the educational field to people who provided him opportunities along the way. In turn, he has tried to provide opportunities for all children, most especially the special needs youngsters he has taught over the years.

While a special needs teacher in Wilmington, for example, Jim was then, as he is today, an unabashed advocate for his kids. In 1959, when money targeted for special education got sidetracked into other areas, Jim pushed for its return. He earned a diploma as a cabinet maker in night school to help provide vocational training for students with little hope of a career after high school. He worked side by side with his special needs students in metal shop making products and teaching the fundamentals of math through the sale of those same products.

As an administrator of special education in Lowell, Jim was the first person to set up a testing program for youngsters referred to his department. He worked closely with area hospitals to obtain therapy and evaluations for those in his care. One time, at his invitation, representatives from Purity Supreme visited and set up a simulated store atmosphere in his school to train handicapped youngsters in the retail business. Later, those same students were offered jobs in the store. All told, Jim was able to give his special kids self-confidence and the needed tools for surviving in an often hostile world.

While Jim's dad provided the impetus to better himself through education, it was his wife Eleanor, says Jim, who most influenced his life with her constant encouragement and support. Between them, they have raised three children: Jamie, 22; James, 20; and Jodi,17. They have also made several trips back to Greece. At least two of those visits they would rather forget.

In 1963, Jim and a friend were detained by the government and almost drafted into the Greek army while their horrified wives waited on the sidelines for the mess to be straightened out. Out of a 36-day vacation, recalls Jim, who can now laugh about the incident, 20 of those days were spent caught up in red tape and urging the Greek Pentagon to return his passport so Jim could return home.

On another occasion in 1965, Jim and Eleanor ended up visiting Athens in the middle of the student riots. After their MG was bashed in by the mob and panic started to set in, the couple held aloft a picture of the Greek president and were allowed to pass through the streets.

In 1973, Jim began the long road to earning his doctorate, something he calls "an accomplishment you can't describe." He completed 56 hours of coursework, took his comprehensive exam in 1981, and worked several years on his dissertation dealing with dropout rates of special education students with a normal range of intelligence.

If anyone has earned a right to look back with a sense of pride in his many accomplishments, it is Jim. Instead, Jim modestly attributes his success to others and downplays his own role, saying "my ego doesn't get in the way" when something important has to get done.

As our talk concludes, Jim turns thoughtful and asks a favor.

"I want to send a message here. What happened to me can happen to everybody out there. There's no limitations. This country gives everyone a right to at least get a high school diploma or a technical skill," he says.

Jim Demos, with his number one fan, wife Eleanor

Karner to demonstrate woodworking technique

Tewksbury's Patten Public Library will host local artisan Brent Karner for a demonstration of his wood-working techniques Saturday, Sept. 9 from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the public library. Mr. Karner will demonstrate the art of surface carving and the creation of the ball-and-claw foot. He will discuss his techniques, and will answer questions on how to identify antiques, questions on finishes and repairs, and other aspects of his craft.

A native of Tewksbury, Mr. Karner is a 1982 graduate of Shawsheen Tech. He also attended North Bennett Street School in Boston, where he learned the art of fine furniture making. He specializes in antique reproductions and custom-made contemporary furniture. he designs and builds furniture in his workshop at 250 Whipple Road, Tewksbury.

Mr. Karner's work has been displayed at the Institute of Contemporary Art in Boston, the Bank of Boston, and other locales. He currently displays and demonstrates his craft in a studio at "Brush with History," located at the Lowell National Historical Park. His works have also been displayed previously at the public library.

Mr. Karner is the recipient of a grant from the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council, as administered by the Tewksbury Arts Lottery Council. This financial support has enabled him to prepare professional-quality photographs of his furniture.

Women's club plans breakfast, flea market

Good health course begins Sept. 7

We all make daily health care choices. Some of those choices keep us overweight and others encourage poor exercise habits. Lowell Community Health Center will help in the health care decision making process by offering a six week course called "Good Choices, Good Health" beginning September 7. An afternoon session will take place from 2 to 3 p.m. and an evening program will be held from 5 to 6 p.m.

Class members will explore facts about fat and cholestrol, vitamins, salt and fiber and learn skills to help promote weight loss, change eating behaviors, and increase the level of healthy exercise. The course is free and pre-registration is required. To register for this interesting and important opportunity, please call Lori Hurley, LCHC dietitian at 937-6100.

Lowell Community Health Center, an affiliate of Lowell General Hospital, is located at 597 Merrimack St., Lowell.

Zionist to speak at First Baptist Church

David Decker describes himself as a Gentile Zionist with an incurable Jewish heart. Since he was 19, David has been active in communicating the Gospel to Jewish people. David has also been working as a meteorologist since 1976. He and his family felt called by God to Israel 10 years ago and have been living in Tel Aviv, where David is thrilled to be working as a research meteorologist in the Israel Weather Service. He has assisted CBN with its "Middle East TV" on a part time basis, and forecasts the weather for such diverse locations as Beirut, Damascus, Tel Aviv, and Nazareth. It is rare for non-Israelis to find job appointments in their field which can then help them be absorbed into society.

Of course this special arrangement affords many natural opportunities to be a witness for the Messiah Jesus. The Deckers feel that God has given them this miraculous opportunity to work and raise a family in the land of the Bible at a crucial time in world and Jewish history. As an avid Bible student, David feels that we are seeing the beginning of the great Jewish national and spiritual renaissance foretold by the ancient prophets.

According to his understanding of these prophecies, the world may now be racing toward an historic showdown in the Middle East prior to the coming of the long awaited Messiah. David and his family consider themselves privileged to be experiencing first hand this unfolding prophetic drama, and are delighted to be able to share their excitement about the Scriptures with the Israelis.

You are invited to meet David and experience the excitement he has for evangelizing the Israelis. He will be at the First Baptist Church in Wilmington Sunday evening, September 10 at 6:30 p.m. The church is located at 173 Church St., next to Wilmington High School. For further information, call the church office at (508) 658-8584.

Tewksbury High School football coach Bob Aylward puts his charges through their paces during a Tuesday afternoon workout. The Redmen scrimmage Gloucester at home Saturday morning at 9 a.m. and that game will be followed by the annual TMHS football reunion at the Elks picnic area starting at 1 p.m. (Rick Cooke photo).

Wildcats look to move up

This year Wilmington High School football coach Ed Harrison has a veteran team hoping to move up a few notches in the MVC standings. Harrison is shown making a point during Tuesday afternoon's practice at WHS. (Rick Cooke photo).

NESN sponsors successful clinic

New England Sports Network (NESN), the regional cable television service and Continental Wilmington sponsored a Red Sox Baseball Clinic Thursday, August 31.

Red Sox pitching coach Bill Fischer, firstbase coach Al Bumbry, bullpen coach Dick Berardino and pitcher Mike Smithson conducted a clinic for area youngsters ages 10-15 at the Wilmington Little League Field from 10:30 a.m. to 12:15 p.m.

The clinic included instruction on field positions, pitching and hitting.

The coaches and Mike Smithson also gave each participant an autographed baseball and other great prizes.

Each year NESN delivers live and exclusive coverage of over 95 Boston Red Sox games and 40 regular season Boston Bruins games plus home playoffs.

NESN also delivers live and exclusive coverage of Hockey East games including playoffs; the Beanpot Tournament; Big East and New England college basketball; Boston College football; New England college soccer, lacrosse, and baseball; Pawtucket Red Sox baseball; Maine Mariners hockey; regional boxing, fishing, candlepin bowling, auto racing, scuba diving, outdoors programs, specials and much more.

NESN is a joint venture of the Boston Red Sox, Boston Bruins, and WSBK-TV Channel 38.

Pitching coach Bill Fischer

The Red Sox staff has ranked among the A.L.'s best in least walks and most strikkeouts since Fischer has been the club's pitching coach. In 1988 the Sox led the A.L. with 1,085 strikeouts (second best in majors) and were sixth in least walks. The Sox were second in least walks in 1987 and first in 1986.

At the end of the season, Fischer was selected by the BoSox Club as the Red Sox Man of the Year for his cooperation in community endeavors and contributions to the success of the team.

He was the first non-player to win the award. During the season, Bill coordinates baseball clinics for area youth in conjunction with NESN Cable TV.

Fischer joined the Red Sox as John McNamara's pitching coach in 1985 from Kansas City where he had been a minor league pitching instructor in 1984. Prior to that assignment, Bill was the pitching coach for Cincinnati where he worked with McNamara in 1979-82 and with Russ Nixon in 1983.

Fischer was signed by the Chicago White Sox in 1948. His pitching career lasted 20 years, which included nine seasons in the major leagues. Along with the White Sox he also pitched for Detroit, Washington, the Kansas City A's and Minnesota. Bill served in the Marine Corps for two years (1952-54).

Fischer is known for his outstanding ability to throw strikes. He holds the major league record for most consecutive innings without giving up a base on balls, 84.1 August 3-September 30, 1962. In 1965 he pitched a 1-0 shutout for Indianapolis in which 70 of his 90 pitches were strikes.

Bill was a scout for the new Kansas City Royals from 1969-74 and was their minor league pitching instructor from 1975-78. After his stint in Cincinnati, he returned to the Royals in 1984, serving in the same capacity as he did when he left. In 1976, he received the Ewing M. Kauffman Award for his outstanding contribution to the Kansas City organization.

Dick Berardino
bullpen coach

Dick is getting his first major league experience this year as the club's bullpen coach. He spent 23 years as a minor league manager and coach, the last 21 in the Red Sox organization.

In 1988 Berardino was named manager of the year by the Carolina League and overall Class A manager of the year by Baseball America. His Lynchburg Red Sox overcame a 24-25 first half to finish 43-27 in the second half to win the Northern Division's second half by one game.

The L-Sox then eliminated defending champion Salem two games to one in the semifinals before losing to Kinston in the finale of a five game series for the championship.

Dick gradauted from Watertown High School in 1955 and Holy Cross College in 1959. A three sport star in high school, he played football and baseball at Holy Cross and led the Crusaders to the 1958 NCAA District One title. He hit .378 as a rookie at Modesto in the California League in 1958 after signing with the Yankees. In 1961 he was a Texas League All-Star hitting .301 with 20 HR and 93 RBI for Amarillo.

He spent several seasons as a minor league outfielder and then began a managerial career in 1966 with the Sarasota Yankees in the Gulf Coast League. He joined the Red Sox system as a coach at Jamestown, NY (NYPL) in 1968 and became a manager for Boston at Williamsport in 1971-72 and then Elmira in 1973-85. He coached at Pawtucket in 1986, then moved back to the managerial ranks at Greensboro (SAL) in 1987.

firstbase coach

This is Bumbry's second year as the Red Sox firstbase coach. He also assists in outfield defensive

REAL ESTATE GUIDELINES

By Sharon Kelley, G.R.I.
Kelley & Kompany

STRUCTURAL INSPECTIONS

If you have a house for sale, your buyers will probably include a contingency in the contract asking for some time to get a structural inspection. They will hire an expert to look at the way the house is built and to check out the major systems and any appliance that convey.

A professional structural inspector will help buyers get to know your house and feel comfortable with it. It's not an inspection that results in a pass or fail grade. The buyers will learn important things about the house. How do they find the water cut-off valve in an emergency? Are there any cost-effective energy conservation investments they might want to make after the settlement? How should they set up a budget for repairs over the next ten years? Buyers rarely back out of a sale after a structural. Even if there are problems, you have an opportunity to negotiate a compromise early in the transaction, helping to avoid problems that could threaten the sale if discovered later on.

If there's a move in your future, the real estate experts at Kelley & Kompany are ready to serve you. Call us at 658-4171 or drop by our office at 20 Middlesex Avenue in Wilmington.

Outdoors column

After 20 years we still grieve

by Bill Conlon

All sorts of 20th anniversaries are popping up this year.

The 20th anniversary of Woodstock, that watershed outdoor event in upstate New York.

The 20th anniversary of landing men on the moon, perhaps the most amazing technological achievement of our century.

And the 20th anniversary of the death of my Dad.

William H. "Sonny" Conlon, Jr., was born in Lowell to a successful physical therapist of that name. Bill was a graduate of Keith Academy and served a few years in Texas with the Army. For a while he had his own physical therapy practice in Lowell, but later worked in P.T. for Somerville Hospital.

Bill Conlon married Rita Murray of Tyngsboro, and together they gave rise to six children, two sons and four daughters, all of whom survive and miss him terribly.

Twenty years ago this weekend, Bill Conlon came down with chest pains after playing softball, and a few short hours later he was gone. That's it. Gone. He was cut down by a massive heart attack, or properly a myocardial infarction. He was 41.

Just like that, our lives changed forever. There was no warning, no deathbed watch, or days of praying for his recovery. Around 10 p.m. on that fateful night, the word came in from the hospital that he was gone, and the screams and crying began. I can still hear the screams.

At first I didn't realize the depth of my loss. Sure it hurt, but the pain was manageable. I was only 14, the oldest of the six kids, and I was sad at the event. Just sad.

But my pain grew as time passed. It never occurred to me then how much I'd really lost that night. With each passing year, my loss grew. It hurts more now than it did in 1969.

"The Wall" came when I reached my teenage years, and there was no Dad there to answer those delicate questions about the opposite sex. How could I have even guessed the questions at 14 which plagued me so terribly at 17?

Dad had begun to teach me about hunting when he passed, but we did go fishing a lot. My memory is full of brief snippets about time spent fishing. The snippets are too brief, too few. I can remember ice fishing on Lake Winnesquam, and dunking a worm in the big brook across the street, or trying to coax a trout out of a roadside stream that I haven't been able to find since that day.

Or dream-like images of my Dad asleep in the boat on a hot summer day, or working a perch fillet along the edge of the lily pads, to tempt a big pickerel into blasting it. Mental images of that sort are precious. And I've got those mental pictures only because I was the oldest. My brother, Kevin, loves to fish, but he had to teach himself. He was too never got to go fishing with his Dad since he was too young at the time. He feels the pain, but he hasn't any memories to comfort him.

But that's all I have -- flickers of how life once was, and can never be again. Right now I'd give my right arm to go fishing with my Dad, or sit down and buy him a beer -- just once. But it will never be.

Thankfully, my dear uncle John took me under his wing, and taught me to hunt. If not for him, I'd have been someone else today, and I may never have written this story for a newspaper. I'm different, and I can only thank those who were there as I grew into what I am.

Uncle John took me hunting and fishing, but God alone knows why he put up with such a lanky, noisy pup at his heels. I surely cost him at least a dozen deer with all the noise I made, but Uncle John never said a word about it. Tolerate me he did, and slowly I came around. That's a debt I can never repay.

Later I came to rely on friends as fishing partners, but marriage has now claimed most of them. It's just too much to ask for a married man to disappear without warning for a night of fishing, so I often go alone. My wife puts up with it because she says I come home mellower after a fishing trip. Thanks, hon. Fishing does leave me mellow.

Still, I'd give anything to take my Dad fishing, just one more time. He's the fishing buddy I never had, at least not since I've come out of the fog of childhood. Oh, the things we could talk about. Have I met his expectations? Does he approve? Is he any good with a rubber worm?

Those of you reading this, don't let your Dad slip away, or you may lament that mistake for the rest of your life. Having a Dad is a luxury, not a duty, and he won't always be there. Don't take him for granted.

Your Dad can be your best friend and fishing buddy, or he might be a royal pain. That doesn't matter, because he's family and that's closer than any friend you can ever have.

If you fight with your Dad, shame on both of you. It takes two to fight, so look hard at where you stand and what you fight about. Do it now.

Someday your Dad will be gone, and you might not notice until too late just how big a part of your life he really was. There is pain ahead, guaranteed. He will die, eventually. Try to get your fill of having a real Dad now, while you can. Plan a few hunting and fishing trips with your Dad, to gather up new memories.

Someday soon, those memories of your Dad at play will seem so very sweet. Irreplaceable, like a book of old photos. I only got to sip from that cup of dreams, and I cry for memories that might have been.

It's been 20 years since "Big" Bill left, and little Billy still cries, even harder than before. Burning, bitter tears.

I miss you more than ever, Dad. If only I'd shaken your hand. Or given you another hug. If only ...

--- Tackle Box --

Kind of tough to shift gears to a lighter topic after that, but ...

Don't forget the Hunter Safety class being held for free at Tewksbury Rod & Gun, starting this week at the Chandler Street quarters. The class begins at 7 on September 7, and runs until October 19. Show up at the TR&G clubhouse and you're enrolled. It's a fun, interesting and worthwhile class to take.

The annual Shawsheen Watershed Environmental Action Team (you know them as S.W.E.A.T.) cleanup of the Shawsheen River is planned for Saturday, Sept. 16, from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m., starting from the Tewksbury K-of-C on Main Street. Bring boats, rakes, shovels and chainsaws, if you can. If you know a stretch of river that needs help, call 851-9505 or 851-4094.

The Greater Lowell Fly Fishers will hold a bass fishing derby, open to the public, on September 17, on the Merrimack River. Entry fee is $10 each, and the headquarters will be by the Lowell public boatramp, on Route 113, opposite Heritage Ice Cream.

September 23 is National Hunting & Fishing Day, and the focus this year is on the contributions to wildlife made by those of us who go outdoors for fun. Whether or not you believe in hunting or fishing, it's those of us who take to the field who have done more good for our wildlife than all the armchair complainers put together. That is true! The theme of Hunting & Fishing Day this year is "For the Tradition ... and for the Fun of it." Share the wealth with a friend, neighbor, or an office mate. And give yourself a pat on the back, while you're at it.

On Sunday, September 10, the Andover Sportsmen's Club will be hosting a 3-D archery shoot, open to the general public for a mere $5 for adults, $3 for those 13 or so.

Ralph Poloian of the club said the shoot will involve 30 targets, set up on the club's 57 acre spread, with stakes set at varying ranges. You hike to the target, place your foot against the stake and shoot. A hit in the vitals on the lifelike foam target is worth 10 points, a near-vital shot is five points, and a miss is just a miss. The shoot will be split up into classes for different skill levels and ages, and the first target is a full-size bull caribou, standing some six feet at the shoulder. The Club is off Salem Street in the Harold Parker State Forest, or look for the signs when you near the ranger station. Registration is from 8 to 11 a.m. so don't be late. Thanks for the call, Ralph.

Al was named a Red Sox minor league coach specializing in outfield play and base running in January 1986. He ended a 13-year M.L. career in 1985. Bumbry spent his entire career with Baltimore except 1985 when he hit .200 (19-95) in 68 games for San Diego. Al had a .281 career avg. (1422-5053) in 1496 games with 254 stolen bases. He holds the Orioles career stolen base record (252) and is sixth on their all-time hit list (1,403). Al won the A.L. Rookie of the Year Award in 1973.

In 1980 he became the first Oriole to have 200 hits in a season.

additional receipts and went into the general fund shared by all town departments, including the school department. Kaminski suggested the school department cut only $120,000, Shawsheen Tech cut only $9,000, and the town bear the remainder of the deficit.

"I think what we're talking about is an issue of fairness," agreed school committeeman Aldo Caira, who argued that 43 percent of the surplus should have been given directly to the schools. When Stewart said there was a misperception and free cash had been given earlier to the schools to meet its shortfall, Caira noted that the surplus monies prevented the town from cutting services and allowed employees slated to be laid off to remain in their positions.

Both sides argued the merits of asking the schools to bear an equal share in the deficit. Committee members seemed to agree with John DeMarco that further reductions could "destroy" any chance for an effective educational system in Wilmington. Stapczynski noted that the town had sustained its share of cuts in such areas as maintenance and repairs, the sidewalk account, and equipment and the schools had benefitted when monies were transferred out of the snow and ice account.

Brad Jackson pointed out that while the town budget is $240,000 higher than fincom's recommendation, the school department's budget is exactly what fincom recommended. Fincom Chairman Neil Waisnor reminded Jackson that the voters had spoken and set the final figures.

Throughout the meeting, neither side proposed specific areas where further cuts could be made. Those present agreed, however, that they should set a direction and ask the redevelopment authority to meet with selectmen on Monday before proceeding further.

Dog report

The Wilmington dog officer is presently holding the following dogs. Dogs picked up in Wilmington are kept at the Central Animal Hospital in Stoneham.

Neutered male apricot miniature poodle, no collar, picked up at 675 Main Street on Sept. 4.

Female white miniature poodle, no collar, picked up at 879 Main Street on Sept. 4.

Dogs held for ten days are available for adoption. Due to limited budgets and space, it is difficult to keep dogs longer than the minimum ten days. Therefore adoptions are now more important than ever, to prevent dogs having to euthanized.

The dog officer may be contacted by calling 658-7845. The number at Central is (617) 438-6404.

For dog complaints, contact the Wilmington Police Department on its business line, 658-5071.

Wilmington senior topics

Council meets Sept. 11

The September Council on Aging meeting will be held Monday, Sept. 11 in the function room of the Buzzell Senior Citizen Center, 15 School St., at 1 p.m. All residents of the town 60 years of age or older are considered senior citizens. To know the members of the Council on Aging and what the council is all about is to attend the monthly meetings.

Surplus commodities

September 20 we will be distributing surplus commodities to Wilmington residents only. This distribution will be the same as in previous distributions - to be eligible one must be receiving AFDC, Welfare, WIC, Fuel, Food Stamps, Medicaid, SSI. If you do not participate in any of the above., you can self declare that your income level is under the current fuel assistance range 2 qualification.

On this distribution we will be giving butter, cornmeal, flour, peanut butter and canned pork. When you arrive have with you proof of eligibility if under one of the above programs. If declaring income eligibility check that box. If we do not recognize you as a Wilmington senior citizen and you are not listed in the town register we will ask to see a senior id card. Please take your own bag with you to take the commodities home.

Shutin meals.

Any shutin wishing a meal delivered must qualify under the programs mentioned or under the income level. Call the center before the 20th so we can get those deliveries ready and set aside before we start distributing to those coming to the center.

Old eye glasses

The Lions Club has requested help in collecting old eye glasses. Many needy persons cannot afford eyeglass frames. If you have any old glasses, why not donate them to the Lions Club? They will be able to make some people very happy. There will be a box on the counter as you enter the center to put the glasses in.

September social

The therapeutic social to Lombardo's on September 14 is only a week away. We have a very long waiting list. Please, if you know you will not be able to attend, call the center as soon as you can. We will be filling the waiting list with cancellations as they come in. No senior who is cancelling can give their place to another person. The office will fill your space from the waiting list. Every senior is checked off before they board the buses. Any senior who fails to cancel out leaving that space empty will be responsible for the full price of the social.

Unsigned letter, tsk, tsk!!

We have received a complaint on not delivering Meals on Wheels on weekends and on school vacations. If the letter was signed I could have answered it. Unfortunately it was not. We realize a few of our shutins may have a very difficult time preparing something to eat for themselves. Especially if they are disabled, living alone with no family member close enough to take a meal to them on weekends. We are working with several churches to deliver meals prepared by volunteer parishioners to seniors who fall into the above category. Two of the churches are the United Methodist and St. Elizabeth's.If you are all alone, disabled, confined to your home without food for the weekend call your church. They may also have started this volunteer program. If you do not have a religion, call St. Elizabeth's Chapel or the United Methodist Church. As for school vacations, we will double up on meals that are not perishable that can be refrigerated without the fear of becoming contaminated for the vacation week.

Respite care services

The Council is in need of a respite care servicer to meet the need of our disabled and frail elders unable to use the minibus. If interested call the coordinator 658-2258 or 657-7595.

Fair getting closer

The senior fair is getting closer and closer, we are hoping to fill as many tables as we can to satisfy the large number of young people we expect will be coming.With Christmas only a couple of months after the fair, they will be looking for some of our homemade articles, especially mittens for the children. It looks as though we will be busy bees for the month of September. As soon as you finish your article you can take it to the center.

Dr. Leavitt

Dr. Leavitt will be at the Senior Citizen Center Friday, Sept. 8 from 9 to 11 a.m. He will be checking and treating ailments of the feet As you enter the center take a number from Louise.

Lynnfield couple says...

Do worry, be happy

By PHYLLIS NISSEN

"I'm not against country clubs but when people chuck big blocks of time on things they think are going to make them happy - like maybe getting eight hours of sun while the weather is still nice - they're so unfulfilled. And they don't even see why," says Lynnfield's Terri Hickey, Associate Director of Food for the Poor, a Florida-based international, interdenominational, non-profit organization.

"Look at the names of today's magazines," says her husband Michael, recently named International Executive Director of Food for the Poor. "'Self,' 'Us' - this self-centered life style is not making people happy. They're not at peace because they're too much into themselves."

Do worry, be happy.

The Hickeys have been living that philosophy for almost three years now. Hey, Michael likes it ... far better than his previous job as a senior marketing manager for Polaroid at top executive earnings; even better than his most recent job as Executive Director of Charismatic Renewal Services for the Archdiocese of Boston.

In fact, Michael loves it: the four-fifths cut in salary; the fact he could afford to donate rent-free, home-based office space to the organization; the 36-hour-a-day responsibility; the constant phone calls; the recent totally unexpected "promotion" to director-of-it-all, complete with move to Florida; the trips to a third world few want to see. He counts them often, the immeasurable riches come into his life. The daily miracles.

"People are continually handing us money. Everywhere we go," he says. "People hand Terri money in church. 'Here, take this and spend it on Food for the Poor.' People mail us checks because they believe what we are doing has value. We account for every dollar we receive."

But no matter how great the response, the donations are eaten up; the need hammers on; the poverty runs deep, real and unrelenting.

Have you had a third world experience lately? Haiti: "the worst situation of poverty in this hemisphere."

"I went to Haiti about three months ago and the conditions there are worse than ever," says Michael. "You go into the slums and you see - with your own eyes - little children dying in greater numbers than ever before. Dying of simple things that are ridiculously easy to cure.

"In the third world, kids get diarrhea, dehydrate and die - at the rate of 38,000 per year.

"What we're talking about is not like anything in this country," he continues. "People don't eat lavishly in our soup kitchens but they eat well - spaghetti and meatballs, beans and franks or something that will nourish them.

"What we're talking about in the third world is just bare subsistence to keep people alive."

Haiti: rice and beans every day, 365 days a year, if you're one of the lucky kids.

"One meal of rice and beans provided by Food for the Poor, at school, is their only meal of the day - and they're tickled to get that just to stay alive," says Hickey. "It doesn't take much to help. Ten or 20 American dollars feed dozens of school kids a meal a day for months.

"We spend $10 or $20 so foolishly in this country that it means absolutely nothing to us.

"I went into one home there where all they had amongst the whole family was a little vial of milk powder - and they wanted to share it with me ... because I was there.

"Three-quarters of the world is living this way but we don't see it. It's hidden from our eyes but that doesn't mean it's going away. In fact, it's getting worse."

The Hickeys have adopted the credo of Ferdinand Mahfood, who founded Food for the Poor in 1982 in an effort to "build a living bridge between God's people in the United States with His people, the destitute poor of Haiti and Jamaica."

"Basically, Ferdy, Terri and I consider ourselves beggars," says Michael. "If your children were starving, wouldn't you beg? These are all our children in the family of God.

"I think God is found more on the fringes of society than in the mainstream," he continues. "Amongst the poor, the marginalized, the rejected, the oppressed - because the people you find there know more about God and teach you more about God.

"Every time Terri and I have gone to Haiti, we've gone down with the intention of giving and have always come back receiving more than we've given - because we're humbled when we go there. We learn more from them about what counts.

"The people in Haiti have nothing at all of a material nature. They don't have food or clothing or education. Many don't have homes. But they still have joy and camaraderie."

Motorscooters for nuns to ride around on, busses, ovens, sewing machines, lumber, medicine. Whatever the needs are, Food for the Poor answers them directly: through missionaries, independent of government, straight to the people.

The needs run beyond food, encompassing the physical and spiritual. The thrust is twofold: "We're trying to do development in a holistic sense of the entire person, physically, emotionally and spiritually," says Hickey.

"In the economic sense, we're trying in the long term to bring them out of their poverty by shipping them agricultural and carving implements, sewing machines to earn a living, water pumps and things to help them develop.

Food to S-4

FOOD FOR THE POOR ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR Terri Hickey of Lynnfield reaches out to the natives in the slums of Port-au-Prince, Haiti where the funds she and her husband help raise go directly to feed the poor - spiritually and physically.

Just a thought....

Life is filled with so many little embarrassing moments. And a few big ones, also. Take the folks who had their shoes stolen from them as they sat quietly reading at the Boston Public Library. Everybody who's ever gone to a library to red recalls slipping off their shoes to relax. It' simply the thing to do when you're making yourself comfortable for an afternoon of reading. But think of how embarrassing it must be to finish your book and then to dangle your foot around beneath the table in search of your shoes, only to discover that somebody has stolen them! How do you go home and explain that situation to your spouse? Well, honey, I was at the library and somebody stole my shoes....Uh-huh, they think as they envision another's jealous spouse chasing you, shoeless, down the street.

This columnist was once asked what would be the most embarrassing moment in my life. I never gave it much thought, till now. My most embarrassing moment would be to stand at a church altar and not have my wife-to-be show up. Now that would be embarrassing! Really, though, my most embarrassing moment occurred a few years ago, as I rounded the corner on Clarendon and Newbury streets, in Boston, in an old, beat-up Ford Torino I owned. The left front wheel fell off completely, and the car slammed to the hottop, coming to an instant, screeching standstill. I was with a date at the time. She was used to motoring around the city in that junkbox of a Ford, but losing a wheel in the middle of a crowded downtown street was to much for her to handle. The traffic behind us had to somehow, miraculously maneuver around us. They were, of course, not pleased with the delay, and my tossing a halfhearted wave and a smile didn't ameliorate matters much. My date was waiting for one of those classic vehicular-related street brawls to break out at any moment. Luckily for me, since I am far from the world's most adroit mechanic, two fellows, both of them young and dressed in denim, strolled up Newbury Street and offered to help. They knew exactly what had happened: the wheel had come loose from its ball joint. We jacked up the car and set the wheel back onto the ball joint. If I drove slowly and carefully, they told us, the car would be fine until I got it to a service station. We had managed to get through another one of life's little embarrassing moments.

Recently, at one of those large chain supermarkets, a middle-aged woman in front of me in line at the check-out counter complained about how slow the line was moving. First she blamed the young cashier, a high school-aged girl who looked like she was working her first job and then she blamed the several customers in front of both of us. Too many items, too many coupons, so on and so on. Then it came time, finally, for this middle-aged woman in front of me to unload her cart — she had about twenty items in her cart. When the young female cashier completed ringing in her goods, she turned to the woman and announced the total amount she owed. The woman unsnapped her pocketbook and proceeded to search for her money. She located her wallet, removed it, than had to search through it. She discovered a twenty dollar bill, which was tucked inside one of those tiny slots, not in the

Having a baby is hard work. Having it someplace like home can make it easier.

If you're pregnant or planning to be soon, you've got some important decisions to make. We can help you with one of the biggest: where you want to have your baby.

At Great Beginnings, we recognize the impact that childbirth has on the rest of your family. That's why we make sure you can involve them as much, or as little, as you feel is right. We'll provide counseling for your other children if they're anxious about the new arrival; let someone stay with you during labor, even if you're having a caesarean birth; schedule you for an 'LDRP' room decorated to make you feel like you're at home, where you can stay the whole time you're in the hospital, from labor to being discharged: in sum, we'll support you and your family every step of the way.

So find out about Great Beginnings, the maternity center at Malden Hospital, by calling 397-6551. We make choosing the hospital the easy part.

Continue your education at MCC

Continue your education at Middlesex Community College, The Open Campus: Continuing Education/Community Services this fall. For the convenience of area residents, students may register for Fall Semester classes on the date of the first class meeting during the week of September 11.

Evening registration will take place from 6 to 7:30 p.m. at the Bedford, Burlington and Lowell campuses, as well as on the evenings that classes are held at the Acton, Arlington, Chelmsford and Minuteman Tech Instruction Centers. Morning registration hours at the Kennedy School in Lexington are from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m.

As some courses do reach maximum enrollment prior to the start of classes students may call (617) 272-7342, ext. 3240 to see whether a course is still open.

Students may continue to register in person on weekdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Burlington Campus, Terrace Hall Avenue. To register with VISA or Mastercard, students may use the direct registration telephone line: (617) 272-3331.

AARP fall events

The first meeting of the 1989-90 year will be held on Friday, September 8 at 1:30 p.m. at the Melrose Highlands Congregational Church, Franklin Street, Melrose. Please bring your membership card with you. After the business meeting, entertainment is by Mr. Tambo and Mr. Bones who will present "Mini-Minstrels" with songs of a bygone time.

Space is still available for the September 20 to 22 trip to the Red Jacket Resort Inn, North Conway, N.H. Highlights include Heritage, N.H. indoor-outdoor museum and a grand buffet luncheon at the Balsoms Hotel, sightseeing shopping and of course, the beautiful fall foliage. Return will be via the Kancamangus Highway. Call Beatrice Wadland, 665-1442 for a reservation. There is a waiting list for the Oct. 25 Indian Head day trip and for the Nov. 5 "Forbidden Broadway" show in Boston. The December 13 day trip to Fall River factory outlets, White's Restaurant in Westport for lunch with entertainment etc. is filling up also.

AARP Chapter 1124 will be sponsoring the "Grandmother and Grandfather of the year award" which will be presented at the December luncheon. They do not necessarily need to be from the same family but must be a member in good standing of the chapter. Winners will receive a framed certificate signed by the President and Committee Chairman and an award of $50. Anyone in or outside the Chapter can nominate a grandmother or grandfather by sending a letter of not more than 50 words and not less than 25 words to the Committee Chairman, Walter Redding, 133A Summer Street, Stoneham, Ma., 02180. Deadline in November 15.

About the towns

By PHYLLIS NISSEN

WINCHESTER - Patience personified plus special delivery: During his 46-year career in obstetrics and gynecology, Dr. James McDonough of Winchester has delivered more than 17,000 infants. So far.

Winchester Hospital, his home away from home, sees about 200 special deliveries each month, as well as babies needing special care who are brought in from other hospitals. According to McDonough, Winchester Hospital has the best obstetrics unit in suburban Boston and can care for 97 percent of the high-risk babies in-house, rather than transporting them to Children's Hospital in Boston.

NORTH READING - For kiddies from Kitty's: The KidSpot committee and other North Reading residents are feeling very grateful to Kitty' Restaurant owner Ron White for his $1,000 donation to the town playground.

P.S., by the way and bearly visible: A townscript in the North Reading Transcript reports that after its recent publication of news about bear sightings in the west end of town, the Paonessas have been notified of at least "four positive bear sightings by adults" although no new bear sightings have been reported to the police.

WOBURN - And this week's winning idea is: The project would be termed the "Winning Farm Center for Children and Families"; the directors have approved a contract with the First Lexington Capital Corporation "to continue development of a comprehensive new plan for the property"; the 114-acre site includes 60 in Woburn, 45 in Winchester, nine in Lexington.

And the programs, according to the Woburn edition of the Woburn Daily Times, could include: pre-school, school age and special needs day care; summer day camps; recreational, athletic and Outward Bound-type courses; family and adolescent counseling; respite care for handicapped children and their families; and other educational programs.

Among the agencies expressing interest in the center are the North Suburban and Greater Boston Y's, Family Service of Greater Boston, North Suburban Catholic Charities, the Woburn Boys Club, and other local organizations.

WILMINGTON - It's all relative: After five "long" years, 32 units of "new" elderly and handicapped housing are nearing completion "as workmen strive to meet their December 1989 deadline." According to Executive Director of the Wilmington Housing Authority Ella Belmore, construction work is "a little ahead of schedule."

SENIOR-CENTERED - The Lynnfield Council on Aging is still enjoying its comparatively new van: urging town residents over 60 to use it on Mondays and Thursdays for professional appointments and encouraging any group of eight to 14 to reserve it for recreational or educational trips on Wednesdays and Fridays.

Massage Therapy office open

Richard Troiano is pleased to announce the commencement of his practice of Massage Therapy at The Self Care Center, 7 Lincoln St., Suite 312, Wakefield. He is certified by the American Massage Therapy Association (AMTA) and in addition to his years of experience doing Swedish Massage, he has, for several years, worked with the AMTA Sports Massage Team at various athletic events, including the Boston Marathon and Cape cod Triathlon.

The American Massage Association was established in 1943, and is the largest professional association representing massage therapists in the United States and Canada. It has a membership of approximately 8000 therapists. The association advocates the use of massage for the enhancement of the function of joints and muscles, the improvement of circulation and general body tone, and the relief of mental and physical fatigue.

In the application of both Swedish and Sports Massage Therapy, the objective, in addition to obtaining the desired therapeutic results, is to provide the client with maximum stress reduction, relaxation, and enjoyment from the massage. This objective is reached through the capability to adjust the application of massage techniques to the clients particular needs, while still achieving the therapeutic benefits from the massage.

Clients will be seen by appointment by calling (617) 245-7303.

Food for poor

From S-1

According to Hickey, better than 94 cents of every dollar donated is being spent in the program - and on the poor. "Which means," he says, "it is costing us only six cents of the dollar to operate."

Within the past year, Food for the Poor has tripled in size - in terms of office space, staff and donors. "We've grown from about 40,000 to 120,000 donors," he continues. "In Massachusetts, maybe 10,000 people support our work. In six years, Food for the Poor has raised over 60 million dollars."

The impact of these donations is great but the need remains "enormous": Food for the Poor - "a ministry that out of necessity has to be run like a business" can fill only one of five requests.

"We don't send any money at all into the third world. We travel into each country and ask what the need is. We deal through no foreign governments. We depend on the missionaries of all denominations - Catholic, Baptist, Methodist, Episcopalian, etc. - to tell us the needs and to distribute the donations," says Hickey.

"Food for the Poor is a highly ecumenical, interdenominational organization and it needs to be. The poor don't have any denomination. They're all ecumenically poor."

Do worry, be happy.

The Hickeys' commitment involves the entire family - Ed, 23;David, 20; Elizabeth, 9; Mary Ellen, 7. And reaches into every aspect of their lives. In bits and pieces, they've modified their life style, slowing it down, consuming less, living their beliefs.

"The major advantage Terri and I have now is this is not a job - it's a way of life," says Michael. "We don't punch a clock or keep track of how many hours we work or of what we do exactly - because our work is integrated into our life, and our life is our work."

There is nothing "typical" about their daily existence. "Every day is very different," says Terri, "because we don't have an agenda hat is our own. We try to pray and discern where we can best be used at a given time, in a given day.

"I go to morning mass and we try to get a little exercise in every day, because those are the things we think help us make better decisions or at least cope with some of the unforeseen stresses.

"Part of our philosophy," she continues, "is that the whole person needs to develop - and if we're not doing that for ourselves, we're not going to be any good to Food for the Poor, our family or the people who come by every day and ask, 'Can we talk about this?'"

Their open door policy begins at home. "There are poor in many forms," says Terri, "and even though we're concentrating so much on one avenue and trying to do a good job, something's wrong if we overlook someone who comes knocking at our door with a job crisis or a family loss.

"We feel refreshed by the quiet time we take for ourselves. It gives us a little bit of perspective about where to go, who needs us most and how to say no."

The Hickeys can't say enough about the local support they've received, especially from friends and neighbors in Lynnfield and surrounding communities. They're planning several "fundraisers" in the fall, ranging from steps each individual can take to community support of the needy - around the corner and across the world.

"People are becoming more and more conscious of the way they waste things," says Terri. "We can make sacrifices at home with our intake of food, the way we buy clothes. We share items with our neighbors when we outgrow them. People can do so many things to free up their budgets - share cameras, VCR's, vacation homes, books, summer clothes, toys. That way, things are much more equal.

"It's amazing what people can do when they pool their resources - and we don't just mean financial. Attorneys have offered their services, dentists, nurses. There are just so many avenues where people who have been so well trained in our country can - in small and large ways - make a difference.

"All of us are in this together. There are so many variables and so many ways we can cross borders."

Food for the poor, a concept much greater than food; treasure, time and talent - the three T's according to Michael. Write a check, no matter how small. Volunteer your time, no matter how little. Multiply your gifts - sing once a year for Food for the Poor; sell a painting; cook a spaghetti supper.

He and Terri aren't asking you to give up your earthly bits and pieces. They merely want you to read the brochure enclosed in today's supplement; become a part of the collective good; look at life in a new way; take that first step toward inner peace.

Do worry. Be happy.

"Step out in little ways," says Terri. "Develop a mind for the poor. Do something that will take root - not just in your own lives - and your sense of worth will grow by leaps and bounds. If you do something for the other guy, no matter how small, you'll be on the right track. You'll feel better about life in general. You'll feel an inner sense of peace.

"Every person we help is a success story - as long as a need is met and that person gets over a hurdle.

"We want to challenge people to grow. We have a long way to go ourselves - we're far from perfect people and we don't want to give anybody advice - my husband and I and our family are just trying to live more simply.

"We have two beat-up cars, but they run. We have the same mobility as everybody else."

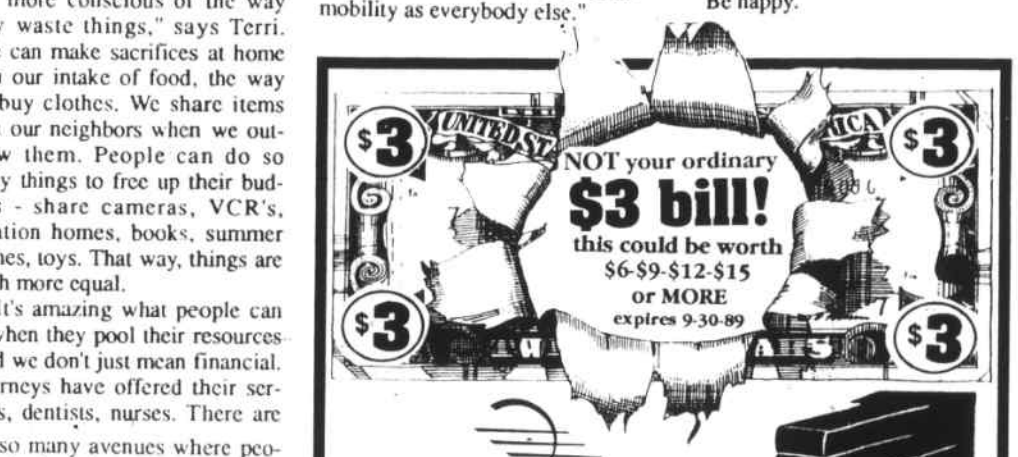

"People are so wrapped up in their own lives, they don't realize that's why they're not happy," says Michael. "It's only when they take an interest in someone other than themselves who isn't as materially blessed, that they come out of themselves."

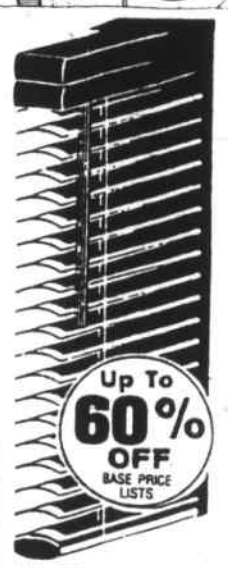

"'The one who dies with the most toys wins.' People are thingified," he adds. "And they're not happy. If people just simplified their lives - like one organization says: 'Live simply so that others can simply live.'

"We see that as our message - simplify your life and share what you have with others. That's not communism. That's communionism."

Do worry.

Be happy.

FREE HUNTER SAFETY COURSES IN MIDDLETON

State Instructor Robert S. Jenkins will hold a Basic Hunter Safety Course within the Danvers Fish & Game Club on Log Bridge Road by the Danvers/Middleton townline. The course is free to the general public, and includes five Saturdays from September 9th through October 7, from 8 to 11 p.m. Registration takes place at 8 a.m. sharp on September 9th followed by the class. Adults, as well as younger men and women, are encouraged to attend. A state Hunter Safety Certificate is provided to course graduates, 14 years or older. Youngsters, ages 10 to 14, may participate and request a "Letter of Completion" to meet out-of-state licensing requirements. Parental permission is required of all students under 18 years of age.

Each year state instructors and Massachusetts Environmental Police hold over 100 hunter safety courses throughout the state. The state certificate issued at these classes serves two legal purposes. First, this card allows young men and women between 15 and 18 years old to hunt alone on their first Massachusetts hunting license. Secondly, the certificate is currently necessary for either adults or minors to purchase a hunting license from other U.S. states and Canadian provinces. All states in the northeast have such requirements, except for Massachusetts. Many experiences hunters post have such requirements, except for Massachusetts. Many experienced hunters participate to qualify for out-of-state licenses.

For additional information on courses, write HUNTER EDUCATION, P.O. Box 408, Westminster, Ma 01473 or call the program office at (508) 792-7434.

Woodchips

By ANTHONY MANCONI

Folks, I would like to set the record straight. I don't get headaches because of a "Halo." I know there are some people who don't like Woodchips. Here are some of them and their comments: Jimmy Geary, of Lynnfield, "I read your column every week and I am convinced that you are `Stupid'. It must take four like you to change a light bulb- one to hold the bulb and three to turn the stepladder." "Jimmy,a dear fan of mine, Karole McLaughlin, told me that you brighten a room when you leave." Jimmy Quinno, of Woburn, "You fancy yourself a writer, why you couldn't hold a candle to Bill Sullivan of the Chronicle." "I agree with you Jimmy. I tried holding a candle near Bill but he keeps moving away." Al Pymm, of Burlington, "I like the column, who writes it for you?" "I write it Al, who reads it to you?" Aunt Nora, from Wilmington, "There are numerous professional people in the immediate family and one colossal failure, "YOU!" "Thanks Auntie, I know that you still take your Grouch pills every morning." George Gould, of Wakefield, "Cows may come and cows may go but, the Bull in Woodchips goes on forever!" "George anyone can tell that you were a mailman- you still have the bags under your eyes." Dep. Fire Chief John Sweeney, of Revere Beach, "In fire fighting classification, your column would be a "False Alarm." "Just for that John, I won't lend you my dog Rover to help find the hydrants in snow drifts this winter." Mario DiMino of Stoneham, "Just like skiing, Woodchips is going downhill." Don Harris, of Woburn, "Give up writing and grow vegetables for a living, every good garden has a `Worm' like you." "Thanks Don, I remember you said that you are a part-time bartender helping to keep the town half-lit." Jean Hallet, "I never met you Woodchips, but you must be a wonderful person." "Thanks Jean, I'm afraid to meet you and prove you are wrong." Folks, I'll have more later, because now that I am retired from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration in Winchester, I have more time to interview wonderful people like those above.

Kathy said to me last night, "I'm exhausted making instant coffee, jiffy rice, quick frozen dinners, instant mashed potatoes- a meal is one mad rush."

Well, it's back to school again for many readers. Even fish are in schools. A teacher asked a Herring, "Where's your brother?" "How the heck do I know, am I my brother's "Kipper?" Bob Burns of Woburn went to the hardware store and said to the clerk, "Where are your mouse traps? I'm in a hurry, I have to catch a bus." "I'm sorry sir, we don't have mouse traps that size."

Officer Bob Giguere was dispatched to a Main Street Reading address that a man was playing a saxophone at 2 a.m. in the morning. "If you insist on playing that instrument at this hour of the day," Bob said, "I must ask you to accompany me." "Certainly," the mad musician replied, "and what song are you going to sing?" Vinny Harrington of Reading said to his lovely wife Ruthie "I've taken you over some rough pot holes on the road of life dear." "I know that Vinny, and you haven't missed even ONE!" I am happy to report that the North Reading upholsterer who was sick has recovered nicely.

Woodchips personality winners are Buzz Stapczynski, Jeff Hull, Senator Robert Buell, Representatives James Miceli, and Augusto Grace and Joan O'Rourke all of Wilmington, Paula Coppola, Renee Bova, David Harrington and Paula Vaughn all of Tewksbury, Patricia Kilty, Chris McCarthy, Gerry McCarthy (of Mac's Landscaping), Bridget Ward, Sally Thatcher, Dr. Paula Sline, Stephen McLeod, Kim O'Neil, William Cousins and Don Clarke all of Stoneham, Stephen J. Daly, Bob Killian, Elsie Phinney, Margie Salt, Jennifer Park, and Larry Tremblay all of North Reading, Nicky Bowers, Eileen Marsan, Paul Tarkiainen, William and Judith McKeown (Happy 25th Anniversary), Spike Boyle all of Woburn, Edmond and Marie Baratta, Florence Gosslin R.N., Michele Fleming, Rev. John H. O'Donnell, and Cathy Felix Rabbi all of Winchester. Rev. Thomas H. Fox, Roderick A. MacDonald, Leland Prebble all of Burlington.

I am happy to have had, Howard Culshaw, of Lancoshire, England as a visitor this month of August. He is a graduate of Durham University and a classmate of my nephew Charles Ruberto. Howard hopes to be an attorney. I hope he does better than my Uncle John who could never pass the bar. Even at age 85, he never used glasses- he always drank straight from the bottle. I told Howard of a beautiful English woman who worked as a secretary for an insurance company in Reading. Rowan Fitzgerald, called and asked to speak to Mr. Smith. "I'm terribly sorry," she replied,(in a distinguished English accent), "Mr. Smith has gone to the United Kingdom." "Oh! I'm sorry to hear that," Rowan exclaimed, "is it too late to send flowers?'

At the Woburn Elks, Johnny Ave said to me, "Hey Woodchipper, you can put in your column that I have a silver medal for swimming, four for football, I have a diamond belt for boxing and two cups for golf." "Holy smokes!" I shouted, you must be one heck of an athlete." "Not really," Johnny said, "I just happen to own a pawn shop in Boston." The teacher told Joe Ravida, "Give me a sentence with the word, `bewitches', in it." Joe replied, "Youse go ahead and I'll bewitches in a minute." You know folks, they still talk that way, down on

NORTHERN ESSEX COMMUNITY COLLEGE

Ellen Dawkins of Boxford did – so can you!

Ellie Dawkins is a Licensed Practical Nurse who worked in a clinical setting for over 24 years. "Then," says Ellie, "I decided I wanted a change to something less physically demanding." Ellie wanted to leave the clinical field but still use her background knowledge. She switched to the Medical Record Department of St. John's Hospital in Lowell, her long-time employer.

"I liked working with medical records," Ellie says, "and there are good opportunities for advancement in the field, but only if you have a degree." Ellie decided to study at Northern Essex – it was close to home, no other nearby college had a program in Medical Records, and she could study at night and still manage her job.

Ellie graduated in 1989 with an associate's degree from NECC in Medical Record Technology, receiving a Student Achievement Award from the Massachusetts Medical Record Association for academic excellence.

Currently, Ellie is responsible for the coding section of St. John's Medical Record Department. "I like interacting with the medical staff and keeping documentation straight," Ellie says. "I also like working in a field with an increasing pay rate and lots of opportunity for future growth."

MOVIE REVIEWS Rochelle Flynn

"Wired" and Short Takes

"Wired" Starring Michael Chiklis, Lucinda Jenney, Patti D'Arbanville, Ray Sharkey, Gary Groomes. Directed by Larry Peerce. Produced by Edward S. Feldman, Charles Meeker. Screenplay by Earl Mac Rauch, based on the book by Bob Woodward. Rated R.

The whole idea kind of makes you want to gag.

John Belushi did not die with dignity. Most certainly the media did not let him rest in peace, but turned his early death at 33 into a feeding frenzy, with juicy gossip as the bait. As this film, based on Bob Woodward's best-seller, does nothing to dig beneath the surface of all that mud flung in Belushi's direction, you kind of wonder why it was put together. It's not as if the film offers any insight as to why this talented comedian lived with a death wish.

Woodward, that famous investigative reporter from "The Washington Post," wrote his book after Belushi's widow, Judy Jacklin Belushi, invited him to do so. There are a couple of references to this invitation in the movie, as if the film needed justification. Perhaps it does.

John Belushi died in 1982. Not so long ago. He has friends and family who obviously did not want to be associated with this film, as we never see many of the people Woodward mentioned in his book. Robin Williams, who was with Belushi the night he died, never shows up. Nor does friend Carrie Fisher or any of the cast from "Saturday Night Live," with the exception of Dan Aykroyd, who comes off as a none-too-bright sidekick.

We never see any of his family, get any sense of his struggle from obscurity to fame. No attempt is made to try and explain Belushi's compulsive personality. An even greater cinematic sin is the fact that we are left with no sense of the comic mind that came up with all those "Saturday Night Live" skits many of us still treasure.

Sure, we see Michael Chiklis in a killer bee costume, we watch an entire, unfunny samurai skit, a Blues Brother's song is performed. But we could watch these in re-runs. It's not the same as showing us how they came about. We never even get a glimmer of the inspiration behind all that creativity, never even see a member of "SNL" other than Aykroyd.

If the filmmakers wanted to avoid churning out a typical biopic by ignoring Belushi's early life, fine. But you can't sidestep all his life's history in favor of a surrealistic look at the night he died. Audiences want more than a little fluff for their six bucks.

What the film does have going for it is a spirited, intense performance by Chiklis and an interesting interpretation of Woodward's book by screenwriter Earl Mac Rauch and director Larry Peerce.

The press kit makes note of the "Capra-ish" adaptation of the book. Well, that's stretching it a bit, but the idea of a guardian angel arriving at the moment of death and easing Belushi into his new existence really does work. Not only does it help to keep the film from looking like an absolute piece of muckraking trash, but it let's us imagine the way a fast-talking, outrageous personality like Belushi would react to his own death. Factual? Realistic? No, but it is an entertaining concept and, aside from Chiklis' finely honed performance, there isn't much else going on here.

The technique, however, of letting Belushi and his guardian angel, played with a no-nonsense vitality by Ray Sharkey, gets pretty weird as it winds down. The film intermingles Belushi's life, told via flashbacks with him looking on, and Woodward's interviews. It all comes together toward the end, so we have Woodward in the Beverly Hills bungalow, watching the comic die.

Okay, we all get the sense that Woodward really got to know his subject, but this is ridiculous. Woodward seems to have covered all the bases when writing his book, as his interviews with family and friends are well documented. If the book had been used as a real source material and not just as a sort of whimsical influence, this could have been a powerful tragedy, even with the artsy presentation.

All in all, "Wired" does little to dissuade some of the tastelessness of a movie based on the death of a man who so influenced an entire generation and who died only recently. After all, this guy still has family around and you can't help but feel badly that his death is still being resurrected in order to make a buck.

It was just too soon to tell the story, too many people are still affected by it. As tacky as it might sound, this project would have faired better in 25 years. A couple of decades from now people's careers would be winding down and they may not have minded being associated with a film chronicling their involvement with Belushi. But nooooo, they just couldn't wait.

SHORT TAKES

MILLENNIUM is a standard B movie with an interesting idea, but a very miscast couple of leads. Cheryl Ladd plays a time traveler who accidently alters history during a backward journey. She tries to straighten everything out with the help of Kris Kristofferson, but the plot becomes bogged down in twists and turns. With a more dynamic duo and a simpler plot, this wouldn't have been half bad, even with the cheesy special effects. Rated PG-13. *

THE WIZARD OF SPEED AND TIME is an adorable fantasy starring Mike Jittlov, a real-life special effects man who takes us on an odyssey through the strangest land of all - Hollywood. He uses his magical effects to show us just how hard it is to get a film made, all the while sprinkling a moderate dose of laughing powder on this cinematic stew. It suffers on occasion from a weakish plot, but nothing you can't live with, as this little film is just a delight. Rated PG.  1/2

RELENTLESS could have been a movie-of-the-week, had it not been so gory. As it stands, it's an okay thriller starring Judd Nelson as a wacko serial killer who teases the cops with notes and messages, daring them to catch him. Not much new here although the killings are excrutiatingly violent and Nelson gives a better performance than you'd expect. Rated R. **

LET IT RIDE is a strange "comedy" starring Richard Dreyfuss as a compulsive gambler who wants just one lucky day at the track, and gets it. The movie plays out more like a series of vignettes than an actual movie and is not the madcap romp the ads would like you to think. Also, if the film was trying to tell us something about compulsion and addiction, you wouldn't know it from the unrealistic, typically Hollywood happy ending. Rated PG-13. * 1/2

CASUALTIES OF WAR is an intense, explosive drama set in the Vietnam War. It revolves around the abduction, rape and murder of a Vietnamese woman by an American troop, and the man who fought to have criminal charges brought against his fellow GI's. Like much of the war itself, this is a story not so much about black and white issues, but about all the shades of grey inbetween. Probably the best film Brian De Palma has ever directed, it features stand out performances by Sean Penn and, surprisingly, Michael J. Fox, who proves he is capable of much more than just being cute. Rated R. ****

Healthy Women.....
Comprehensive answers to today's woman's health questions.
by Roy A. Epstein, M.D. & Shaila Phansey, M.D.

Q: I am pregnant with my second child. I had a caesarean section the first time I delivered. What are the chances that I could have a vaginal delivery this time, and how safe would that be?

A: Approximately 24% of the babies born each year are delivered by caesarean section. 33% of these births are repeat caesareans. We encourge our patients who have had a previous caesarean to try to deliver vaginally. The success rate is 50-80%. Complications are very rare today due to both electronic fetal monitoring and the availability of an anesthesiologist at all times. Each case, however, should be evaluated individually to determine the safety of a vaginal birth after caesarean (VBAC).

Q: When should one start an infertility workup? How long should the infertility trial be?

A: If a couple is not able to achieve a pregnancy after trying actively to conceive for one year they should have an infertility consult. The length of fertility trial depends on the cause of infertility in a couple. As a rule, if drug therapy is involved, six cycle therapy, with a particular drug is sufficient. If pregnancy is not achieved during this time a change in therapy is indicated.

"We have brought the personal touch back to the delivery of health care."

Olympic level training begins at Reading Gymnastics

The olympic sport of gymnastics is exciting to watch. As the competitors soar gracefully thru the events making the skills look easy to perform, you have to wonder, "How did those gymnast get so good?" The answer begins when they are little beginning to training thru motor co-ordination and gaining self-confidence in a young gymnasts ability to perform.

Reading Gymnastics Academy has been training champions since 1982. More importantly it has been teaching the sport of gymnastics on a professional level for that same period of time. Learning gymnastics has to be fun as well as educational. Thru the progressive programs that are offered at RGA, a gymnast learns all the fundamentals that will guide him or her to higher levels that they might seek.

As a leader in the field, Reading Gymnastics offers programs that meet for a minimum of one hour each week beginning when the child learns to walk up to the age 18. PlayGym is the first lessons for the mother and child (plus many grandmothers or fathers as well.) PlayGym starts at walking age to 3 years. From 3 years thru 5 years is considered pre-school, where a low gymnast/instructor ratio keeps a childs interest in the learning process. This follows with regular gymnastics on skill progressive levels for both boys and girls.

A professional staff, who are USGF Safety Certified work with gymnasts in small groups to help them learn. All the latest in equipment and techniques are available for the gymnast to learn to their fullest potential. Whether gymnastics is for fun and fitness or future intensive training, Reading Gymnastics Academy is able to provide for all your gymnastics needs. Fall classes are now forming for all levels. Reading Gymnasatics Academy is located at 172 Woburn Street, Reading or call 617-944-2277.

AT READING GYMNASTICS ACADEMY a professional staff member is always available to assist gymnast of every age learn to their full potential.

Hot, new comedy "Better Days"

Better Days, Richard Dresser's fiery new black comedy, is scheduled to open on September 1 at the Gloucester Stage Company. Set in Lowell, Better Days focuses on Ray, an unemployed factory worker who has been "chosen," first by God and second by the biggest little arson corporation in the state.

As Ray and his pals search for "better days," playwright Dresser skewers everything from TV evangelists to the American way of doing business. GSC Associate Artistic Director Grey Cattell Johnson is slated to direct Dresser's sizzling comedy.

Better Days runs September 1 through September 24 at the Gloucester Stage Company, 267 East Main Street, Gloucester. Performances are Wednesday, Thursday and Friday at 8 p.m., Saturday at 6 p.m. and 9 p.m. and Sunday at 5 p.m. Tickets are $12 on Wednesday and Thursday, $15 on Friday, $16.50 on Saturday and $13 on Sunday. For further information and reservations, please call (508) 281-4099.

New gymnastics center in Wilmington

Lori Rosati formerly of the Reading Gymnastics Academy, is opening the Northeast Gymnastics Center in Wilmington with some of the "best instructors available.

Lori has over six years experience running a program, working both as team director and class program director. Her responsibilities have included training instructors. She has coached several state champions who have gone on to national competition. Last week she was in Texas with Marianne Quaratiello of Wakefield and Suzy Person of Lynnfield who are participating in the XXIII A.A.U. Junior Olympics.

Lori is accepting registrations for her classes which start on September 11. There will be classes for parent and tots; pre-schoolers; beginners through advanced led by a staff of experienced instructors. These will include Laurie Levasseur of Wilmington, Karen Chaplain of Lynn, currently a student at Gordon College and Brenda Leonard of Lowell; a recent graduate of the U. of Oklahoma. All were formerly associated with the Reading Gymnastics Academy. The staff are all certified through the U.S.G.F. Safety and first aid program. To reach Northeast Gymnastics Center from Rte. 93, take the Concord St., through the blinking yellow lights and take your first left onto Lopez Road into an industrial park. Northeast Gymnastics is way in on the right. This location is also conveniently located off Rte. 62 as well.

Northeast Gymnastics center will have an open house Friday, September 8 between 7 and 9 p.m., and Saturday, September 9, 10 to 12 a.m. Come join the fun! For more information please call Lori at (508) 988-0678.

Woodchips from S-6

the corner where I used to hang out as a young whippersnapper.

My sister Maureen is a frustrated artist. Her husband (and my friend) Danny couldn't care less about these so-called famous paintings. Maureen said to Danny last week, "I wish you would buy me something tasteful in oil for the dining room." Danny being a very considerate person stopped off at the supermarket coming home from work and bought Maureen a "Tin of Sardines." Tatta Boy Danny. Folks, I'll tell you how that story ends next week. I hope you didn't forget that my sister Maureen is a Red Headed Spitfire.

A couple was very late and a babysitter said, "There's no need to apologize, if these were my kids, I wouldn't be in any hurry to get home either." Fat men are generally good natured peace loving souls. Maybe it's because most of us can't fight and are too fat to run. Father John Crispo of St. Margaret's Church in Burlington is an eloquent speaker. After a fire and brimstone sermon one Sunday my Aunt Nora waited to tell him, "Father that was a wonderful sermon, everything you said applies to somebody I know." Helen ran to her father all excited saying, "Danny wants to marry me, but he doesn't believe that there's a hell." "Marry him anyway," her father replied, "Between your mother and me, we'll convince him that there is one." I remember when my sister Maureen said to me, "I think Granny needs glasses, she's sitting in the kitchen in front of the washing machine." "What's wrong with that?" I asked. "Nothing, only she's watching Grandpa's long underwear going round and round and she's shouting-'The best dern wrestling I've seen on the telly in ages!'"

Unemployment up

Massachusetts posted a 4.5 percent unemployment rate in July, Employment and Training Commissioner James F. French announced today. The unemployment rate in June was 4.0 percent.

"The overall growth rate of the economy has slowed, both nationally and in Massachusetts, and this is reflected in the unemployment rate. In Massachusetts, however, the service and finance sectors are continuing to grow at a strong rate," French said. From June 1988 to June 1989, the Massachusetts service sector has seen a healthy growth rate of 3.8 percent, while the finance sector has grown 3.9 percent during the same period of time.

School notes

by phyllis nissen

---Not your usual race for the school board: the Tewksbury School Committee is off to Rockingham Park for a night out and a fundraiser. With unanimous approval within the committee.

A desire to award a scholarship to a worthy high school senior and no funds with which to do so led to approval of committee member Charles Labella's racy proposal. As part of the package, Rockingham Park will name one of the races that night after the school board, and board members may enter the winner's circle at the finish line to award first prize for that race.

Who will win the scholarship? When will "Rockingham Night" take place? Undecided at this point. Gambling "optional" and up to individual"discretion."

---Diana Wetherbee Healy, special education head in Derry, New Hampshire since 1975, is Wakefield's new Director of Special Education.

In answer to several School Committee questions about early special needs recognition, Healy stressed that although some children may be six months off the average learning cycle, they are not necessarily learning disabled.

When asked how she could possible justify increased special ed' costs, she replied that - read between these lines - "the SPED director must advocate for special needs, and hope someone else does the same for regular education so that an equilibrium may be maintained."

The New Hampshire Association of School Counselors named Healy 1988 Administrator of the Year. We name her diplomat.

---"A ninth grader's first day in the high school building, maybe even his or her first month, usually finds tongues sticking to the roof of mouths," begins Wilmington High Principal Paul Fleming's letter to parents of incoming freshmen, who have already been treated to an orientation day complete with complimentary pizza and soda - with bus transportation out of the question, and budget.

Fleming goes on to describe "nervous wonders regarding how they will be treated by the older students, apprehension about the location of certain rooms and programs, and concerns about whether or not friends will be in similar classes during the day or at least within communication range so that perceptions can be compared.

"All of the above," he writes, "plus the locally unique West and North separate identity issue have to be calmed and quickly put to bed."

---Burlington Assistant Superintendent for Curriculum and Instruction Michael Malinowski has been unanimously selected as Superintendent of Schools by the Coventry, Connecticut School Board.

With 18 years of service in Burlington as a teacher and then as Assistant Superintendent, Malinowski was not among the 10 finalists during Burlington's search last spring for a new superintendent.

---The Lynnfield School Committee has unanimously appointed Assistant Superintendent for Curriculum Dr. Jeffrey Young as its new Superintendent of Schools.

Young - who hasn't been in town that long - was the only applicant for the position "after the School Committee voted to post the position within the Lynnfield school system only, foregoing a possibly expensive outside search with the help of a consultant."

Age 36. That's Young.

Still time to order tulip bulbs

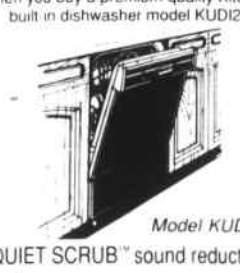

It's not to late to order those reasonably priced tulip bulbs from Middlesex Conservation District, a non-profit group working to save scarce resources of water and soil.

The bulbs, from Holland, will give colorful blooms through early, mid- and late spring. Each bag of bulbs includes planting information and a picture of a flower. Bulbs should be planted before the end of November (or the first hard frost).

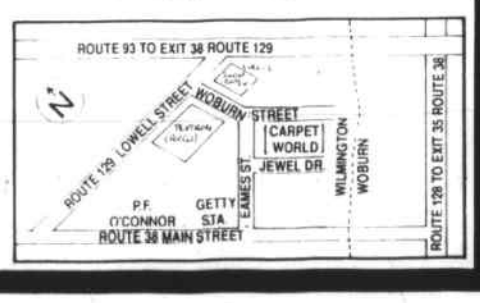

The Rembrant Tulip mixes cream with red, purple and yellow colorations and is a beautiful and rare antique tulip, while the Sorbet, a later tulip, is a mixture of pinks and the Pink Fantasy is a parrot tulip known for its feathery look. All of these bulbs plus many, many more are available.

Orders will not be accepted by telephone, but order forms can be obtained by contacting the Middlesex Conservation District, 40 Nagog Park, Acton, MAss., 01720 - Telephone: (508) 263-2291 - or by sending a self-addressed, stamped, (25 cents), business size envelope to Middlesex Cooperative Extension, 105 Everett Street, Concord, Mass., 01742.

Cooperative Extension, a division of the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, offers equal opportunity in programs and employment.

usual space which paper money is kept, and handed it to the cashier. The cashier reminded the woman that the bill was $20.89. The woman said she had some change in her purse, that she'd have to look for it. Meanwhile, thoughts of her complaints echoed through my mind. I was actually feeling embarrassed for her. It took another minute or so, but she finally counted out the eighty-nine cents from the bottom of her pocketbook. This was one embarrassing moment that I thought would never end.

The friend who'd posed the question to me offered a couple of his most embarrassing recollections: "As much as you think walking out of the men's room with toilet paper stuck to your sneaker will never happen to you, it's right at that moment that it does," he told us. "And that's what happened to me. It was my date who nonchalantly brought it to my attention, as we stood in line at the movies. I was never so embarrassed, and so was she. I make it a habit now to always look down at my feet before I leave the men's room."

A bartender friend of ours recalled the time he split his pants while working a busy bar. "I bent over to reach for a bottle of wine from inside the refrigerator," he said, "and suddenly I felt the bottom of my pants give way. They split a good ten inches! Was I embarrassed! Here I am, trying to act so cool in front of all these female customers, and suddenly I'm standing there with my pants ripped all the way up the back. Thank goodness I had underwear on, or I really would have been embarrassed. Come to think of it, I must have looked pretty stupid anyway, since I had to work the rest of the night with my apron turned around!"

I hate getting caught looking stupid. I have a tendency to enjoy snacking on food at odd hours of the night, and I think nothing of simply slipping on a pair of sneakers and shorts and a tee-shirt, and running out to a convenient store. It is always at that moment, when my hair looks like threads of tar and my face looks like it hasn't seen a razor in a week, that I meet up with somebody important. I always attempt to pass off my unkempt appearance as just a casual break from personal hygiene, but all the way home I'm thinking that that person is wondering if I've slipped into a life of a bum. The poor guy, they're probably saying, I knew him when....

Another friend of ours, a fellow by the name of Gary, related a couple of embarrassing moments in his life. "I went on vacation with my wife during that real hot spell we had a few weeks ago," he said. "I left our dog with my mother, who's in her eighties." Gary went on to describe his mother, a description which left us with this image of a sweet, short, overly kind Italian woman who can't do enough for her forty year old son. "I asked her to leave the air conditioner on for the dog," Gary continued. "I said, Ma, make sure you leave the air conditioner on automatic, so that it doesn't get too cold. Whatever you do, Ma, I told her, don't switch it on manual. My wife and I go away on our vacation. We come back. We walk into the house and discover our dog nearly frozen to death. He's shivering all over! My mother switched on the air conditioner to manual, not automatic. That dog was so happy to see us! My mother nearly froze him to death!"

It was Gary's mother, of course, who felt embarrassed after that incident. There was, however, more embarrassment to come. Gary explained: "Whenever we go away, we always have my mother take care of the house and the pets. Besides the dog we have some goldfish. They are in a tank on top of my son's bureau, which is just a little taller than my mother. To make it easy for her to feed the goldfish while we were gone. I left five little Dixie cups filled with just the right amount of food. I placed the Dixie cups on top of the tank, so that all she has to do was lift up the top of the tank and dump the food in, one Dixie cup for each day that we were away." This effort to simplify things for his mother was, apparently, not simple enough to keep her from embarrassing herself yet one more time. "When we came home we discovered five neat little pyramids of goldfish food on top of the tank," Gary said. "My mother had forgotten to lift up the top of the tank! When I went near them, they all swam at me like they hadn't been fed in a week, which was just about the case. A tank full of $2.50 gold fish had turned into a tank full of piranha!"

Our friend Gary seems to have a penchant for causing embarrassment for other people. Take the time he took his car to the car wash. On the way out of the car wash, he noticed a van parked across the street. A sign next to the van announced that you could get your dog washed and shampooed. The proprietor of this business-on-wheels took the dogs inside the van and performed his service there. "What's a great idea," Gary recalled. "For another few bucks I could get my dog cleaned up, too." Gary's dog is a huge German Shepherd, and he doesn't take kindly to anybody attempting to give him a bath and a shampoo. "I figure this guy might have some luck," Gary went on. "So I gave him five bucks, and he took my dog inside the van and closed the doors. A couple of minutes later, I see the van rocking back and forth. I knew exactly what was going on. A second later, the back door flew open and my dog comes charging out after me. He's covered with soap suds! The guy in the van said I could have my money back, that he couldn't get the dog to stay put long enough to finish the job. I told him to keep the money, that he earned it just for what he had to put up with. Needless to say, he was pretty embarrassed for having lost the battle."

Gary didn't stop recalling his embarrassment-causing antics there. He continued with the time he took his best friend's girl friend into a large department store in search of a birthday gift for him. "We ended up in the hardware section," Gary said. "Judy was poking around. I picked up one of those portable chain saws and started to fool around with the starter cord. All of a sudden, the chain saw started up! I didn't know it had any gas in it! Everyone around us dashed for cover. Judy came running over to me. She couldn't believe that I was playing with that thing. She kept yelling, shut that off, you're embarrassing me to death. I told her, what are you talking about, everybody's run the other way!"

Just another one of life's, er, little embarrassing moments.

Quintet, Sept.27 will feature the Bob Bowlby/Paul Fontaine Quintet, Oct. 10 the Jan Shapiro Trio and Oct. 11, the Cercie Miller Quartet

MY FAIR LADY BENEFITS RED CROSS

The American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay, North Area, in conjunction with the North Shore Music Theatre will present "My Fair Lady," Saturday evening, October 7.

No salute to great musical theatre would be complete without Lerner and Loewe's magnificent masterpiece. One of Broadway's ranking achievements, this musical treasure features a lover-ly repertoire--"I Could Have Danced All Night," "I've Grown Accustomed to Her Face" and "Get Me to the Church On Time."

Bring family and friends to a special performance starring WHDH radio personality Jess Cain as Alfred Doolittle. The date is Saturday, October 7, 1989 at 8 p.m. Ticket sales will benefit the American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay, North Area.

Send your check for $20.00, made out to the Red Cross, to 85 Lowell Street, Peabody, MA 01960. Your tickets will be mailed to you.

HARVEST FESTIVAL AT NASHOBA VALLEY WINERY

Nashoba Valley Winery will hold its annual HARVEST FESTIVAL on Saturday, September 9, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The festival will "kick off" the fall season in the winery's Bolton orchard. The apples will be ripe on the trees, and there will be a variety of activities and events, all oriented around the picking, pressing and using of APPLES!

Most people enjoy picking their own apples, and the McIntosh and Gravenstein varieties will be ready and waiting. "Press-Your-Own" Cider, a Nashoba Valley specialty, is a big hit with children (of all ages).

There will be delicious apple baked goods to eat, as well as recipes and demonstrations of some of the many uses of our wonderful New England apples.

Deaf Heifer will provide Bluegrass and old time country music from 1 to 4 p.m.

Guided winery tours and tastings will be conducted throughout the day. Self-guided tours of the "winery orchard" can be taken at any time.

Picnic foods will be available, or bring your own. Admission and parking are free. Rain date: Sunday, Sept. 10.

Directions: From Route 495 take Route 117 (Exit 27) west one mile to blinking light at Bolton Center. Left at light, 1/4 mile to winery. For more information call: (508) 779-5521.

BANJO AND FIDDLE CONTESTS-SEPTEMBER 9

Lowell National Historical Park will sponsor a day of traditional music on Saturday, September 9, at Market Mills Park on Market Street in downtown Lowell.

Starting at 12 noon, the Market Mills Stage will be the setting for fiddlers and banjo players to compete for cash and trophies in all style categories, including bluegrass, old-time, and ethnic. This year's prize money is over $1500. All banjo players (5-strings, twin banjo-any style, banjo-mandolin, plectrum, tenor, or 6 string), and all fiddlers (as well as twin fiddle-any style) are welcome. Contestants will be allowed to bring their own acoustic accompaniment or piano or guitar accompaniment will be provided upon request. Contest entry and general admission to the event is free.

Before the contest, banjo, fiddle, and dulcimer workshops will be held at 10:30 a.m. Contest registration starts at 11:00 a.m. Preregistration is recommended. Entry blanks are available at the Lowell National and State Parks Visitor Center, 246 Market Street, Lowell, Massachusetts, 01852, or by calling (508)459-1000.

For more information contact Lowell National Historical Park, 169 Merrimack Street, Lowell, Massachusetts 01852, or call (508)459-1000. All events are free and open to the public.
